Jury Exonerates Anne Lyddane in 'Death Plot' Case

Only One Ballot Cast as Panel Ponders Hour on Verdict.

Friend Hints Offer Made by Movies

Matron Expresses Hope of Returning to Husband in Near Future.

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 22.—Mrs. Anne M. Lyddane, 30-year-old Rockville matron, was acquitted tonight of a charge of conspiring with Washington gangsters to murder her husband, Francis (Slom) Lyddane.

The jury of farmers, laborers and clerks required one hour and four minutes to decide that she was not guilty. Only one ballot was taken.

The blonde, blue-eyed defendant leaped to her feet as Ross Wolfe, foreman of the jury, uttered the words "Not guilty."

The Post reporter asked Mrs. Lyddane if she was going to live again with "Slom," her husband.

"I hope to," she said.

A woman friend of Mrs. Lyddane said:

"She is going to Hollywood. She has had several offers."

Mrs. Lyddane, however, laughed at this suggestion.

Shakes Hands With Jurors.

"The men on the jury were real, honest gentlemen," said Mrs. Lyddane. "That's all I can say."

She shook hands with several of the jurors.

James McLaughlin, weather-beaten father of Anne Lyddane, said tonight he could now die happily.

"I am an old man," he said, "but I can now die knowing that our family record is unsullied."

"Slom" Lyddane was not in the courtroom when the jury acquitted his wife. Earlier in the day he had been sitting at her side.

Mrs. Lyddane, together with four Washington underworld characters, was arrested on or after April 1, 1935, charged with conspiring to murder "Slom" Lyddane and Mrs. Arthur Beall.

The prosecution said that Mrs. Lyddane wanted her husband and Mrs. Beall murdered because of her love for Beall.

She was tried in Rockville, Md., last June, but the jury became "hung," six voting for a conviction and six for acquittal.

Shows Little Emotion.

The second trial was brought here because the defense felt that Anne Lyddane could not get a fair trial in Rockville.

Mrs. Lyddane, attired in a yellow dress, displayed little emotion as her lawyers and those for the prosecution addressed the jury.

State Senator Stedman Prescott, chief of defense counsel, described Mrs. Lyddane as a modern Mary Magdalene, and he pleaded with the jury to be as tolerant with her as the Savior was with the original Magdalene.

Judge Frank Wagaman halted Prescott at this point, telling him that such arguments were not allowed in the Hagerstown court.

Pugh said that Mrs. Lyddane's plea of blackmail was a "cock and bull story."

The prosecution contended that Mrs. Lyddane plotted the murder of "Slom," her husband, because of her love for Beall, husky Darnestown garage owner.

Branded Schemer.

The defense argued that the former convicts who accused Mrs. Lyddane of the murder conspiracy actually were trying to escape from charges of blackmailing her.

Prosecutor Pugh, in winding up his address to the jury, turned to where Mrs. Lyddane was sitting with her husband and her father.

"Look at that husband! Look at that wife! She, by her own admission, was for years unfaithful to him, and now she tries to come up to you people and paint herself as a loving, sweet wife that associates with her husband up until the time of this trial.

"You are not dealing with the

D.C. Lump Sum Wins Approval Of President

Roosevelt Favors Bureau Figures, May Force Blanton to Yield.

By James D. Secrest.

Discharge or instruction of the House conferees on the 1937 District supply bill appeared possible yesterday after President Roosevelt had stated at a press conference that he wants the measure passed with the $5,700,000 lump sum and other budget items substantially intact.

Speaker Byrns, when asked what House leaders intended to do to break the deadlock between Senate and House managers, called attention to a comparatively new House rule which permits any member to move to discharge or instruct conferees who fail to report within 20 calendar days.

Such a motion would now be in order as the House conferees on the District bill were appointed April 24. It would have precedence over all other House business as a motion of the highest privilege.

The rule reads:

"After House conferees on any bill or resolution in conference between the House and Senate shall have failed to make a report within 20 days, it is hereby declared to be a motion of the highest privilege to discharge said House conferees and to appoint new conferees or to instruct said conferees."

The House, thus, might by majority vote, instruct its managers to abide by the President's wishes and accept the Federal contribution recommended by the Budget Bureau, or it might name other conferees who would be amenable to compromise with the Senate.

The District-Senate tug-of-war will reach a climax early next week, probably Tuesday, when Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate managers, returns to the city.

Senator Thomas, on the eve of departing for a week-end trip to Iowa, said:

"The Senate most certainly will not yield on the lump-sum payment or the appropriations for public health. It might be willing to compromise on other controversial items."

The Senate sub-committee chairman said that as soon as he returns to Washington he will contact the House conferees to ascertain whether they are still adamant or willing to talk of compromises.

If they still refuse to yield Thomas will then take the issue to the White House and ask Presidential intervention.

The President pointed out at his press conference that it is essential that Congress pass a District appropriations bill before it adjourns. The measure is on the "must" calendar, he implied.

Allocation of Federal relief funds, as suggested by the Senate managers Thursday, would be impossible, Mr. Roosevelt said, because it would be illegal and thus encounter

Thomas Quits British Post After Scandal

Brokers Made Thousands By Insuring Selves Against Levy Rise.

By the United Press.

London, May 22.—Minister for Colonies J. H. Thomas, who rose from locomotive cleaner to one of Britain's political "big five," resigned today after having been named as the source of budget information leaks which caused an insurance market scandal. Due to leaks, the market boomed for protection against higher income taxes and increased duty on tea.

Thomas' resignation was accepted promptly by the government. The following brief announcement was made at No. 10 Downing street:

"The Right Hon. J. H. Thomas, M. P., secretary of state for colonies, having tendered his resignation, his majesty the King has been graciously pleased to accept it."

The alleged leakage of government secrets resulted in a small group of speculators and brokers making hundreds of thousands of dollars by insuring themselves against tea and income tax increases, both of which were provided for by the budget, one of the most guarded of all cabinet secrets.

Vigorously Denied Charges.

A special tribunal was set up by the government to investigate the almost unprecedented case. Thomas was named as the source of the leakage on two occasions.

Thomas testified and vigorously denied that he had discussed the budget with anybody.

His denials were supported by close business and social associates.

The special tribunal completed its hearing Wednesday and now is privately preparing a report which will be submitted to Baldwin and the cabinet early next week.

Leslie Thomas, stock broker son of the 61-year-old cabinet member, testified he introduced applicants for protection against budget changes to Lloyds underwriters, but denied his father had supplied him with any inside information.

Sir Alfred Butt, member of Parliament, also was involved in the investigation as a successful insurer.

The secretary for colonies testified he decided to resign from the cabinet immediately after his name was linked with the case, but changed his mind on the advice of a friend.

Received $75,000 Home.

It also developed that Alfred Bates, a speculator, bought Thomas a $75,000 home in part payment for Thomas' unwritten autobiography, for which Bates agreed to pay $100,000. Bates was among those heavily insured against income tax increases.

The text of Thomas' letter of resignation to Baldwin, dated May 20, follows:

"My dear Prime Minister:

"I understand that the special tribunal today finished public sittings and, therefore, will proceed at once to consider its report.

"However, before the report is known, and without regard for what it may contain, I feel it my duty for reasons which will be stated to send you my resignation from the government.

"You are aware that immediately the announcement of appointment of a tribunal was made known, I wrote to the secretary and offered to give evidence before it. This I have done. My evidence is public property.

"In addition to my evidence, all my private and personal transactions have been submitted to the tribunal. I have come to my decision because the way my name and private affairs have been bandied about renders continuation as a government member impossible.

Chance to Overcome Crisis.

"You know my only object in joining the national government was because I felt sure that a coming together of all political parties, regardless of past differences, was the only chance of pulling this country through the crisis.

"Today I hold that opinion even more strongly than before. But as far as myself is concerned, I feel that instead of being a source of strength to your cabinet I shall merely be a drag on it and not be

Their Flag Stand Causes Dilemma

4 Pupils Refuse to Salute Flag At School in Prince Georges

County Officials in Dilemma as Children of Federal Employe Here Shun Ritual at Oxon Hill Because of Beliefs as Jehovah's Witnesses.

Faced with the first case of its kind in the history of Maryland, Prince Georges County school officials were in a dilemma yesterday over what should be done with four Oxon Hill school children who refused to salute the American flag.

The youthful dissenters, sons and daughters of August A. Lutke, Washington postoffice employe, and Mrs. Lutke, claim allegiance to Jehovah's Witnesses, a religious sect, prevents their acknowledgement of the flag.

Fred, 12, in the sixth grade; Louise, 10, fifth grade; Walter, 8, second grade and Esther, 7, first grade, said they were acting on their own volition when they told Principal William T. Jobe "it's against our religion."

Said spokesman Fred: "It's quoted in the Scriptures, 'Thou shalt have no other God before Thee. That's what we've been taught. That means you can't salute the flag. Daddy believes this, too, but he says for us to use our own judgment."

The problem first presented itself about two weeks ago, but was treated confidentially by school officials until yesterday.

A sixth-grade teacher was said to have noticed that Fred was not

5,500 Quit Jobs At Steel Plant; Seek Pay Rise

Portsmouth, Ohio, Strike Called; Unino Demands It Be Recognized.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, Ohio, May 22.—Approximately 5,500 employes of the Portsmouth plant of the Wheeling Steel Corporation left their jobs tonight, demanding 50 per cent increases in wages and recognition of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers as their sole bargaining agency.

Officials of the association, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, presented the demands ten days ago. Having received no reply by tonight, they said, they called the strike.

Company officials immediately banked the plant's blast furnace and prepared to shut down indefinitely.

The joint committee of the Amalgamated, consisting of representatives of five Amalgamated lodges, said it was unable to reach C. C. Caudill, general manager of the works, this afternoon.

The Amalgamated also demanded breaking up of the company's 17 department councils, organized two years ago among the employes.

Company officials claimed 3,500 of the 5,500 workers were members of the councils, but Amalgamated spokesmen likewise claimed a 3,500 membership.

One hundred and fifty coke workers left their jobs first, with men in other departments following at intervals.

Pickets immediately surrounded the plant in suburban New Boston. A crowd estimated by police at 2,000, both men and women, gathered in the streets.

Six deputy sheriffs were posted to keep order, but there was little indiaction of immediate violence.

Pickets said they would not permit any workers to enter the plant at any time.

Company officials made no immediate statement, but it was recalled that they had refused three times to resognize the Amalgamated.

Culminating several months' study of the project's feasibility, the Washington Criminal Justice Association was formally organized yesterday, its purpose to promote the administration of criminal justice through research and constructive co-operation with existing agencies.

Holding their first meeting, the association's incorporators constituted themselves the board of directors and elected Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, president.

Other officers are John Remon, general manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., first vice president; Ella C. Werner, president of the Soroptomists Club, second vice president; Edward C. Baltz, vice president of the Perpetual Building Association, treasurer, and Joseph E. Rice, chairman of the board of the Washington Optimists Club, secretary.

As chairmen of the finance and membership committees, respectively, Mr. Meyer named Malcolm S. Gibbs, president of the Peoples Drug Stores, and Vincent Saccardi, manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Washington branch.

The officers and committee chairmen will comprise the executive committee, along with the following three civic leaders appointed by the president with the approval of the directors:

William R. Vallance, assistant legal advisor in the State Department and past president of the Federal Bar Association; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, prominent Capital clubwoman, and Newbold Noyes, associate edtior of the Washington Star.

Abandoned Baby Found in Hallway

A 3-week-old baby boy was found abandoned in a first-floor hallway at 406 Seventh street northwest yesterday by Dr. J. J. Fields, a dentist.

Fields, whose office is on the third floor, was told by a patient of a baby wrapped in a blanket lying on the hallway floor. He called police, who took the child to the First Precinct.

Beside the baby was found a cardboard box of child's clothing. No name or mark of any kind could be found to give a clew to the child's identity.

Policemen Irving Lubors and M. O. Myers, radio car crew, brought the baby to the station house. Only on the arrival of motherly matrons from the Women's Bureau did "John Doe" cease crying. The baby was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Vessel Returning To D. C. Grounded

Old Point Comfort, Va., May 22 (AP).—The Southland, steamer owned by the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., ran aground tonight on a sand bar opposite the Chamberlain Hotel and was held fast for two hours before being pulled free by the District of Columbia, another ship owned by the same company.

The Southland was on a special trip carrying children affiliated with the Safety League of the American Automobile Association back to Washington.

The District of Columbia attached lines to the stern of the Southland, but broke two lines before succeeding in freeing the other steamer.

Friend Who Borrowed 50 Cents Dies, Leaves Policeman $1,300

William Truesdell, a Fifth Precinct policeman, cast bread on the water, and it floated back to him 2,600 fold.

He didn't know he'd get anything back when he gave Charles Evermon 50 cents for food in New York five years ago.

But Evermon died last week in New York, and a lawyer called Truesdell by telephone and told him he had been named beneficiary in Evermon's will, that he had been left $1,300.

"I thought the man was crazy," Truesdell said yesterday.

"Sure, I remember Evermon. He used to live in the same neighborhood with me in New York. He was a funny fellow, an inventor. He'd sell an invention and then go on a spree and spend the money. I guess I gave him a couple of dollars during the time I knew him.

"Then I went back to New York five years ago after I had been a policeman eight years. And who should I meet but Charlie. I lent him the money. I'll never forget him when he said:

"'I'll never forget you for this, Willie.'

And he didn't.

"What am I gonna do with my money?

"I'm a sucker for blondes. I'm just 38 and single, but I love the girls . . . I only wished it had been eight or ten thousand potatoes."

Another policeman, sitting nearby, said:

"You're a rich man now, Willie."

Willie said: "You'll never be."

The policemen said: "No, I won't." And then:

"Willie, lend me a half."

Tax Bill Shy $100,000,000, Senators Told

But Harrison Disputes Treasury Estimates; Report Delayed.

'Cushions' for Concerns Burdened by Debt Are Dropped.

By Robert C. Albright.

At odds with the Treasury over "low" revenue estimates on their compromise tax schedules, the Senate Finance Committee yesterday held up a final report until Monday, after studding the bill with last-minute clarifying language.

"Cushions" for debt-burdened corporations were left out of the measure, with the assent of committee conservatives, but only on condition that the proposed 7 per cent surtax on undistributed profits is not stepped up to a higher rate in the Senate.

Surprised at a "tax on a tax" provision they had unintentionally written into the bill, which would have netted the Treasury some $40,000,000, the committee swiftly struck this from the measure.

Contest Treasury Figures

The joker would have levied the 7 per cent surtax on earnings retained by a corporation for the purpose of paying its 18 per cent income tax.

Differences with Treasury experts developed when Government statisticians estimated that the new compromise proposal, embodying the 18 per cent corporate income tax, the 7 per cent tax on withheld earnings, and a normal 4 per cent tax on dividends, would yield only $529,000,000—nearly $100,000,000 less than the President said was needed.

Chairman Pat Harrison said the estimates should have been much higher, and declared he may make his own computations when the bill is completed. Harrison argues that the 7 per cent surtax on withheld earnings would operate to induce greater distribution of dividends, raising the yield from individual normal and surtax brackets. Lawrence Seltzer, Treasury statistician, contended that no allowance should be made in the estimates for such a factor.

Hoped to Get $642,000,000.

Finance committemen had hoped their plan would raise a total of about $642,000,000, and Treasury computations that it would produce only $59,000,000 precipitated a new analysis of the bill, with a possibility that new sources of revenue may be tapped.

18 per cent tax on corporation income	$244,000,000
7 per cent tax on undistributed profit	$225,000,000
4 per cent normal tax on dividends	90,000,000
Total	$559,000,000

This estimate, it was argued, must be reduced by $30,000,000 as result of the $1,000 flat tax exemption given companies earning $15,000 and less, cutting the net revenue to $529,000,000.

This compares with $591,000,000 claimed by the House for its drastic corporate tax schedules, and a grand total of $803,000,000 the House thought it would get from all sources tapped.

May Get Own Experts.

Although $100,000,000 additional may be added to the Senate bill as result of the 80 per cent "windfall" tax on refunded processing levies, this is only "temporary" revenue, and the committee is looking for the permanent $620,000,000 the President says is necessary for nine years. Experts said the $168,000,000 to be produced by Senate continuance of capital stock and excess profits taxes cannot be added to the yield of the bill. The battle of estimates will reach a climax Monday and may end, as Harrison threatened, with the committee preparing its own estimates, using its own experts.

Despite the Senate group's drastic departure from the House rates, business spokesmen, who had hoped the undistributed earnings tax could be discarded in toto, were not greatly elated over the committee compromise. They will ask cushioning of the new surtax as it applies to debtladen and deficit companies.

The executive committee of the American Taxpayers League, at a meeting in New York, viewed the bill as an impediment to recovery. The league concluded that there should be a reduction in the higher or investment brackets of the income tax, and in death taxes.

Roosevelt's Trip to Arkansas And Texas Will Start June 8

On June 8, the day before the Republican convention opens in Cleveland, President Roosevelt will leave the White House for a week's speech-making tour through Arkansas to Texas and back by way of Vincennes, Ind.

The President announced his plan for the swing through the Midwest and Southwest at yesterday's press conference. Observers immediately termed the trip as political in purpose, in that the President's strategy will be to make as much news as possible during the period of the Republican gathering, in order to "take the play away from them."

Late last night the President departed for Hyde Park, N. Y., where he will rest while spending three days with his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, who injured her hip ten days ago in a fall.

He will return to the White House late Monday or early Tuesday.

The question of the date of Congressional adjournment here, now hopefully set by Democratic leaders for June 6, was not regarded by the President yesterday as a deterrent to his trip.

In answer to a question he described the tour as almost definite. He said if Congress has not adjourned by that date the Senate and House would take two three-day recesses in the next week.

The statutes hold that Congress cannot adjourn for more than three days without adjourning sine die. Then a special session must be called. The device mentioned by Mr. Roosevelt would mean meeting

House Is Afraid Of Dr. Townsend, OARP Aid Says

Townsend Counsel

SHERIDAN DOWNEY.

Pension Head 'Ready to Rot in Jail' Before Testifying.

By Felix Bruner.

While Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension advocate, continued to issue defiant statements from a hotel in Baltimore, the House committee charged with investigating pension plans failed yesterday, after a nearly all-day session, to decide what to do about his refusal to testify.

Reversing his previous announcement, made after Townsend had interrupted the investigation by leaving the witness stand and walking from the committee room, that the doctor would be cited for contempt of the House, Chairman Bell (Democrat), Missouri, said that no action had been taken by the committee.

Townsend added to his first alleged act of contempt by announcing that he had instructed those of his followers who had been subpenaed by the committee to refuse to testify.

Believes They Lack Courage.

Sheridan Downey, attorney for the Townsend organization, quoted Towsend as saying that the committee "will not have the courage" to bring charges against the doctor before the House.

Obviously torn by indecision, the committee met in executive session at 10 a. m. At 11:25 it appeared in the committee room and Bell announced the hearing, which had been called for 11 a. m., had been adjourned until 2:30 p. m. At 1:30 p. m. another executive session started, but it was 2 o'clock before a quorum could be mustered. At 4:15 p. m. the executive session broke up with the "no action" announcement.

Meanwhile, a crowd waited in the hearing room. No member of the committee appeared, even to announce adjournment. The next executive session may be held next Monday or Tuesday.

The committee is faced with the alternatives of permitting Townsend to continue his defiance without punishment, to cite him for contempt of the House and if the citation is upheld to try him before the House, or to cite him for contempt and turn the case over to the District of Columbia courts.

Issues New Defiance.

Townsend's latest statement, which was construed as another "bid" for a contempt citation, said:

"If I should fail to challenge the power of the Bell committee to persist in its unconstitutional persecution of the Townsend movement, I should be an unworthy citizen, for in my opinion the activities of this committee are a dagger held at the heart of a democratic government. I am therefore directing Edward J. Margett (California manager), A. J. Wright (Ohio manager), Jack Kiefer (Middle Western director), Capt. Hawkes (Massachusetts director), and Clinton Wunder (Eastern regional director), now under subpena, to refuse to testify before the Bell committee."

The committee had this statement before it while it was considering what to do about Townsend's decision to "take a walk."

Adding to the Townsend pronouncement, Downey said the doctor believed the committee lacked courage, and that it was "afraid" to give him a hearing before the House. He said that Townsend predicted that the committee would "weaky evade the issue and put this baby in the lap of the United States District Court, where there will be no trial before election."

Would Prefer Jail.

"Dr. Townsend will go to jail before he will testify," the lawyer said. "He will stay in jail the rest of his life, if necessary."

Downey added that Townsend "is what Abraham Lincoln would be if he were here today."

Earlier in the day Townsend issued a statement, copyrighted by the United Press, in which he said:

"I will rot in jail before I will go back before that committee."

Bell, who said he was speaking for himself and not for the committee, said Townsend and his associates knew the evidence to be produced by the committee would be "so damaging and devastating that they conspired together for the doctor and his associates to walk

Congress Told To Clear Slate In Short Order

Leaders Striving to End Session June 6, in Time for Convention.

A gruelling speeding up on Congressional machinery in an effort to wind up all action on pending "must" measures before the Republican National Convention was ordered last night as leaders strove to make good their June 6 adjournment forecast.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Senate majority leader, may call the Senate to meet an hour or even two hours earlier during the week, and hold it in session until 6 p. m. daily, as controversial tax and relief measures gain floor right of way.

To cut off a continuous stream of legislation pouring out of committees and to give Senators time to attend morning sessions, the Senate leadership also is considering a call to committee chairmen to cease reporting bills.

House leaders, with dockets already cleared of tax and relief legislation, nevertheless, eyed the tentative June 6 adjournment date with some skepticism. They took the view that the Senate must set the adjournment pace, and they will keep up with it but declined to make any forecasts. The usual adjournment bets are being made in the lobbies, with even money being laid on the June 6 deadline.

Senator Robinson is said to feel that by holding members' noses to the grindstone Congress can complete its work as early as the night of June 5, and certainly by midnight June 6. Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, carried similar word to the White House yesterday.

If last-minute tie-ups develop on the tax and relief bills, leaders plan to take three-day recesses over the period of the Republican convention June 9 and return to complete the business of the session the next week. This course has been followed in past years and usually results in a total cessation of work during the convention periods. Perfunctory compliance with the rules is had merely by convening and immediately closing both House and Senate every third day. Fearing, however that continuance of the session in this fashion might result in a new crop of legislation and an indefinite extension of the session after the convention, leaders are making every possible effort to clean up in two weeks.

Success of their plan depends entirely on the extent of floor controversy on the tax and relief measures. The Senate Finance Committee believes it has forestalled a lengthy floor fight by compromising in committee the major questions at issue, and appropriations committeemen say extended floor debate may be prevented on the relief issue. They point out, however, that these are factors beyond their control, as are the House and Senate conference fights that may follow.

Textile Group Praises Boost In Cloth Tariff

Industry Hails Roosevelt's Action; Metcalf Holds Step Inadequate.

As the textile industry on the whole bestowed praise yesterday on President Roosevelt for ordering a 42 per cent tariff increase on cotton cloth importations, a series of other foreign trade development competed for the attention of economists:

1. An international trade empire, built in the last few years by Japan coincident with the Japanese imperial advance in Chinese territory, was revealed in figures reported by the United States Tariff Commission.

2. Senator Jesse H. Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island, criticized the 42 per cent increase as "wholly inadequate," and "of no real help to cotton workers or manufacturers."

3. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, speaking in New York, said "Regimentation on an ever-increasing scale, large and growing unemployment and a constant expansion of subsedies and doles are inevitable accompaniments of economic isolation."

4. President Roosevelt said that his tariff boost in cotton cloths is not in conflict with his reciprocal trade agreement policy.

5. Commerce Department figures showed that United States imports were $114,197,000 more for the first four months of this year than last, while exports were up $80,554,000 over the first third of last year. The increases were 17 and 12 per cent, respectively.

6. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, noting that there was no "usual spring business lull" this year, said that more than 255,000 workers returned to employment, and weekly pay rolls went up $4,200,000 in manufacturing and nonmanufacturing industries in April.

$12,414,000 Surplus.

The gain of imports over exports showed more than $12,414,000 in an import surplus thus far this year. Last year there was an export surplus of $21,229,000 for this period.

Throughout the week, however, Government experts have stressed the reciprocal trade policy as meaning that "the Nation must buy if it expects to sell."

In answer to a question at his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt said the theory of the reciprocal agreements was to lower tariffs without injuring domestic producers. He said his order to raise the cotton cloth tariff Thursday resulted from information that one phase of an import industry was suffering from foreign imports. He emphasized that a "gentlemen's agreement" had been sought with Japan, but had fallen through.

This agreement fell through, however, for reasons different than are usually assigned, a study of the Tariff Commission figures showed. These statistics disclosed that a large proportion of Japanese-made cotton cloths are manufactured in homes and in establishments employing less than 10 people. Such small units are not amenable to production control efforts, it was held.

Japan Best Buyer.

In the meantime, as Japan made vast inroads on the foreign markets of the United States and Great Britain, it continued to be our second best customer, buying 90 per cent of her raw cotton here, although reselling it in huge quantities to us in the form of cheap cotton cloths. Japanese advantages there consist of cheaper labor, swift, scientific advance in manufacture and long hours.

April exports totaled $193,400,000, the Commerce Department statistics stated, with imports set at $202,437,000—the third successive month that the Nation has bought more than it has sold.

Even as these statistics were released, however, Secretary Hull, in New York, was telling a foreign-trade luncheon meeting that:

"The imports of corn represented in 1935 about 2 per cent of average production; of wheat, a little over 3 per cent; of beef, 3 per cent of average slaughter; of pork, one-tenth of 1 per cent of average production, and of butter, 1 per cent. The peak of the importation of all these products was passed last winter, as the effects of the drought have gradually worn off.

"It is these temporary and already diminishing imports, which have an almost trivial significance in relation to our own enormous production, that are recklessly described as a vast in-pouring stream of foreign agricultural products!"

Australia to Curb Imports From U. S.

Canberra, Australia, May 22 (AP).—Australia's new trade policy was announced officially today as mainly affecting business with the United States and Japan.

Sir Henry Gullett, assistant minister for trade, told the House of Representatives there would be drastic tariff increases and a licensing system on a wide range of foreign goods.

He said the government's policy was designed to divert imports amounting to more than £2,000,000 (about $10,000,000), from "indifferent" customers to British and other customers of Australian goods.

Goods which will be licensed include automobiles, while specific duties will be substituted for existing ad valorem duties on foreign cotton and artificial silk goods.

The new trade policy, Sir Henry said, is designed to divert trade to the value of £1,000,000 to Britain.

Extortion Charged In Liggett Murder

Miami, Mla., May 22 (U.P.) Fritz W. Danielson, former St. Paul carpenter, today was indicted by a Federal grand jury on charges of attempting to extort money from two St. Paul men in connection with the slaying of Walter Liggett, crusading publisher.

Danielson was accused of writing letters to Isadore ("Kid Cann") Blumenfeld and Meyer Shuldberg in St. Paul, demanding money under threats of disclosing information bearing on the murder of Liggett. He is free on bond under the charges.

Blumenfeld was tried and acquitted on a charge of killing the St. Paul publisher.

By Franklyn Waltman

INCREASING tariffs on cotton goods, chiefly because of increased imports from Japan, seems a funny way for the United States Government to celebrate Foreign Trade Week. The President's action constituted a jarring note in the midst of oratory from members of his Cabinet praising the exchange of goods the world around.

WALTMAN

Aside from the discordant note, however, much is to be said both for and against the President's action. While it is true that, even with the striking increases in Japanese imports in recent months, foreigners have been supplying less than 1 per cent of the country's consumption, it is also true that these imports have harassed the domestic industry.

Despite the contentions of Ambassador Hirosi Saito, of Japan, earlier this week that the success of his countrymen in the American market is not based on cheap labor, it is a well established fact that the Japanese textile manufacturer can undersell the American producer because of lower labor costs.

But that is not quite the whole story, either. The Japanese are using more modern equipment in the manufacture of cotton goods than are many of the American factories and they have developed skill in the work. President Roosevelt at one of his press conferences a year ago indicated that many American textile mills had obsolete machinery and manufacturing methods. Such a condition is not healthy for any country.

But increasing the tariff on cotton goods does not help improve that condition. Indeed, it encourages inefficiency, since it constitutes a governmental subsidy to the inefficient—with the American consumer paying the bill.

There is another angle to this situation. Japan has become this country's best customer for raw cotton. Not all the cotton purchased here is made into cloth for American consumption. If it were, the argument would be quite valid that we could profit by keeping our cotton at home and making our own cloth.

American raw cotton, however, is used for cloth sold by Japanese throughout the Orient in low-price markets in which the American manufacturer could not hope to compete. The dollars received from the sale of Japanese cotton goods here are used to buy the cotton. Now, if there is a diminution in the receipt of dollars, the Japanese will have less to spend for raw cotton. Instead, the Japanese will buy more cotton from, say, Brazil, which will buy cotton cloth from Japan.

The net result will be a loss in cotton sales abroad and a further encouragement of Brazil as a cotton producer. As Brazil forges ahead in the production of cotton, the competition in the world cotton market becomes keener and less favorable to the Southern planter.

Thus, while the increase in the tariff rates on cotton goods may be very helpful to the American textile manufacturers, it may not be so good for the American consumer, nor for American economy as a whole. The point that appears lost most of the time in these foreign trade problems is that American dollars spent for foreign imports eventually are spent in this country for a commodity that is exported.

President Roosevelt, in a message celebrating "National Maritime Day"—a part of Foreign Trade Week—asserted that "the comfort and happiness of people everywhere depend, in large measure, upon the ability of each nation to obtain adequate access to the raw materials and other commodities, which are necessary for modern modes of living, but which are unevenly distributed over the surface of the globe.

"These indispensable resources of our civilization can become available to all nations in a peaceful and orderly manner through the process of world trade, in the operation of which shipping is an element of vital importance. Enlightened self-interest dictates to each nation the need and the wisdom of a healthy expansion of its foreign trade."

Much has been said about raw materials since Italy demonstrated its determination a year ago to seize Ethiopia on the plea that it had a right to sources of raw materials. Some of this discussion seemingly has proceeded on the basis that some of the countries possessing raw material were refusing such essentials to other nations.

President Roosevelt, in his message, points the discussion in the right direction because he recognizes that the problm of raw materials is a problem of markets. No country refuses to sell other countries raw materials. They are only too happy to sell raw materials to countries that can afford to buy. But, in order to have the foreign exchange with which to purchase raw materials, countries requiring them must be able to sell their products abroad.

Thus, the United States is not only willing, but anxious, to sell raw cotton to Japan. The difficulty is that we are unwilling to buy Japanese cotton goods and other products. So how can Japan buy our cotton? That is the problem, and it is not solved by boosting tariff walls.

Roosevelt Trip

and recessing immediately every three days.

The trip to Canada is postponed indefinitely, the President indicated. But his manner of answering questions on the subject left little doubt that he has not abandoned the idea, but has merely shelved it for the present.

The Southern trip is programmed to include Little Rock, where the President will make a speech June 10 in connection with the State's 100th anniversary of its entrance into the Union.

The next stop will be the Texas Centennial cities, hailing that State's 100th anniversary of independence from Mexico.

The President likely will visit San Jacinto battlefield at Houston and the Alamo at San Antonio. This will be on June 11. On the next day he will go to Dallas, center of the celebration, after stopping at Austin, the State capital, en route.

The plan then calls for a night at the home of Elliott Roosevelt, the President's son, in Fort Worth. On the morning of June 13 the Presidential train would pull away for Vincennes, Ind., where the President will dedicate the memorial there to George Rogers Clark, Revolutionary War hero.

The President has one other pre-convention trip scheduled. One week from today he will take a yacht cruise after attending Memorial Day exercises at Arlington National Cemetery. From his yacht, the Potomac, he will watch a water pageant at Annapolis that night. Boats there will re-enact Stephen Decatur's recapture of the frigate Philadelphia from pirates in Tripoli Harbor on February 3, 1804.

Seized British Subject Released by Italians

London, May 22 (AP).—The Reuters (British) News Agency reported tonight in a dispatch from Djibouti, French Somaliland, that it was understood L. J. Bonner, British Red Cross worker, said to have been arrested in Ethiopia, had been released on parole following the intervention of the British consul.

Viscount Cranborne, British Parliamentary Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons yesterday Britain was taking and would take "the most energetic steps" to determine Bonner's whereabouts.

Bank Looted of $800.

Milltown, Wis., May 22 (AP).—A robber held up the State Bank of Milltown today and escaped with loot estimated at from $800 to $1,000. The safe contained approximately $8,000 which was overlooked.

Flag Salute

raising his hand to his forehead when the elementary school met for opening exercises.

After a scriptural explanation of the situation had been made to the teacher, Fred, with his brother and two sisters found themselves in the office of Principal Jobe.

"Don't you realize you owe allegiance to your country?" asked Jobe.

"Yes, but to salute would be placing the flag above God," answered Fred.

Lutke was called in, and after another scriptural explanation the matter was placed in the hands of the county school board. Nicholas Orem, county school superintendent, said the board had not acted, and he was at a loss to know what could be done.

The 1927 legislative code governing schools provides that "it shall be the duty of the (county) boards of education to prepare for use in public schools of the State a program providing for the salute of the flag and such other patriotic exercises from time to time."

Mrs. Lutke told reporters yesterday that she would rather have her children removed from the school than see them salute the flag. She said she had given them a thorough training in the "right and wrong," but had let them decide for themselves concerning the saluting of the flag.

Besides the four elementary school pupils, two other Lutke children, Ruth, 14, and Francis, 13, have expressed similar sentiments of allegiance to "Jehovah's Witnesses." However, they are high school students and are not required to participate in the exercises.

The problem is the first of its kind to confront school officials near the Nation's Capital. In Massachusetts two young followers of the religious sect were sentenced to a "training school" for refusal to salute.

The problem also has arisen in Pennsylvania, Ohio and California.

Acheson Urges Court Outlaw Power Grants

Former New Dealer Says Program Is Leading to State Socialism.

By the United Press.

A former member of President Roosevelt's "little Cabinet," who quit to fight New Deal recovery policies, asked the District Supreme Court yesterday to outlaw the Government's municipal power program before it leads America into State socialism.

The one-time Federal official was tall, dignified Dean Acheson, resigned Undersecretary of the Treasury, now representing four private utility firms.

He attacked PWA's outright grants of 30 per cent and loans of 70 per cent to cities for their own electricity plants, saying:

"If the New Deal can do this legally, your honor, it can give away and lend money for State-owned shoe factories, steel mills, steamship lines and anything else.

"The municipal power program threatens to lead America into State socialism if declared constitutional."

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat listened attentively. He hardly moved in his high, leather-backed chair as the former New Dealer argued more than two hours in a conversational voice.

Part of Plan at Stake.

A major part of the Administration's plan for lower electric light rates was at stake. PWA has allotted $200,000,000 for municipal projects and hundreds of millions more for Federal hydro-electric dams already approved by the United States Supreme Court.

The Government's defense came from Alexander Holtzoff, special assistant to the Attorney General in charge of power litigation.

"The Constitution," he argued, "says Congress may levy taxes to 'provide for common defense and general welfare' of the country.

"Expenditure of money for the relief of unemploymnt is for the general welfare of any nation. Public works programs are almost as old as civilization itself."

Challenge Suit Rights.

Holtzoff challenged the right of the Alabama Power Co., the Iowa City (Iowa) Light & Power Co., the Oklahoma Utilities Co. and the Texas Utilities Co. even to bring the suit.

Closing arguments will be completed next Tuesday.

They will feature another former Democratic official, Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War under President Wilson, and Jerome N. Frank, PWA power attorney.

Chief Justice Wheat said his ruling would be based on three points: Constitutionality of the law; legality of PWA's action if the statute is valid, and the right of the companies to sue.

Shannon Will Give Dinner for Pages

Pages of the House of Representatives will attend a dinner at the Shoreham tomorrow night given by Representative Joseph B. Shannon, of Missouri.

The invitation was issued in the form of a proclamation designating "when and when every page of the House of Representatives shall meet and assemble in happy and hungry mood for their fourth annual adjournment dinner as my guests"

The chief pages, John McCabe, of Indiana, and T. V. Martindale, of Ohio, will preside. The pages will debate on, "Should pages of the House of Representatives be equipped with roller skates."

Air School Change Refused by House

By the Associated Press.

The House yesterday defeated, 206 to 81, the Senate-approved bill for removal of the Air Corps Technical School from Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., to Denver.

The vote, which went against the recommendation of the War Department and the House Military Committee, came after two hours of debate during which it was charged repeatedly that the main reason for the suggested transfer was to locate the school near a large city so officers could enjoy greater social privileges.

Chairman John J. McSwain, of the Military Committee, vainly argued that it would be "in the interests of national defense" to relocate the school in the Far West.

Merged Ballet-Opera Seen at Metropolitan

New York, May 22 (AP).—The Metropolitan Company displayed what one of its directors called an experiment with a new art form in Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice" tonight.

Jean Pengelly, a native of Toronto, Canada, was the Eurydice to Anna Kaskas' Orpheus, in the story of the poet who sought his dead wife in afterworlds.

The new form found the singers seated with the orchestra in the pit, the members of the American Ballet miming the action on the stage. Richard Hageman, whose "Caponsacchi" will have a premiere in the current popular season, conducted.

Fight on Crime

large cities which have pioneered in tackling the broad problem presented by the rise of crime. The Washington organization, in common with others, will in no sense be an apprehending, Prosecuting or judicial body but, rather, a fact-finding unit which will cooperate with all official agencies concerned with the administration of criminal justice.

Section 3 of the certificate of incorporation states:

"The business and obects of the operation with all officers, depart- obtain an efficient administration of criminal justice in the District of Columbia through constructive coopertaion with all officers, departments and tribunals charged with the administration thereof, and to gather, record and disseminate the facts regarding all criminal cases originating within the District of Columbia to its members and to citizens of the said District, and to keep them informed regarding the administration of criminal justice therein, and for the mutual improvement of its members, and to do and perform every act appropriate or necessary to carry out any of the foregoing objects."

Although creation of such a group has been discussed several years, no concrete progress toward the goal was achieved until last winter when plans were discussed at a dinner mass meeting held at the Hotel Mayflower. Founding of the association was a direct outgrowth of the meeting.

Speakers at the assembly included Newton D. Baker and James M. Hepbron, heads of the Cleveland and Baltimore crime commissions, respectively, and Justin Miller, of the Department of Justice.

Incorporators of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, who now form the board of directors, are as follows:

Ann Archbold, Edward C. Baltz, Henry N. Brawner, jr., Emma McLean Castell, Beatrice A. Clephane, James A. Cobb, J. Harry Covington, the Rev. W. L. Darby, Clarence Phelps Dodge, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., Fred A. Emery, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Malcolm S. Gibbs, Daisy G. Grimes, Charles H. Hellegeist, Margaretta K. Hume, C. D. Kaufmann, W. M. Kochenderfer.

Remon, Joseph E. Rice, Vincent Saccardi, Rabbi Abram Simon, Arthur Clarendon Smith, Jesse C. Suter, William Roy Vallance, Ella C. Werner, Roland Whitehurst, James G. Yaden, Ann Kelton Wiley and Santus W. Zink.

Elected to the board of directors at yesterday's organization meeting were Mrs. Jesse K. Biddle and Mrs. Mary Church Terrell.

Board Orders Bus Employes Be Reemployed

Labor Relations Unit Acts in Favor of 18 Workers Fired by Arnold.

Eighteen employes of the Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co., discharged on March 4, 5 and 6 because of union activities, yesterday were ordered restored to their jobs by the National Labor Relations Board.

The men—bus drivers and garage workers of the company's Clarendon, Va., repair shop—will receive back pay ranging from $12 to $35 a week, dating from the days of their discharge, the board ruled. All had been actively interested in Local Union, No. 1079, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America.

Complaint against the company was issued by Bennett F. Schauffler, regional director of Baltimore, on March 11, and a four-day hearing was begun March 23 before Trial Examiner John M. Carmody. The bus company, principal owner of which is Leon Arnold, was organized in 1926 and operates between the District and nearby Virginia points.

Union Organized Feb. 24.

Twenty-four employes of the company organized their local union on February 24 and received their charter March 3, after membership had grown to 59, a majority of all the employes of the coach line.

About February 27, according to its own admission, the company learned of the union activities of its employes. Two days later officials authorized the insertion of a "help wanted" advertisement in a morning newspaper.

Various company officials, evidence showed, made hostile remarks against union employes, particularly those active in forming the group.

Into the testimony crept a remark made to Joseph R. Harmon, a union driver, by a spokesman for the company, who told Harmon he was surprised to learn of his affiliation, and that "Arnold would put his buses on a lot and burn them" before he would recognize the local.

Firm Member Accused.

When the union gathered at a member's home to receive its charter, Joseph Arnold, a member of the firm, appeared wearing a bus driver's cap, and learned what was going on, testimony brought out.

Next day four union members were discharged, and on March 5, eight more. Six additional members were "fired" on March 6.

In the bitter controversy that followed before the board, the company steadfastly maintained that those men who lost their jobs were let out because of "inefficiency." The evidence, in the opinion of the board, did not sustain this charge.

In its final opinion yesterday the board ruled that in the case of all the discharged men, the majority of them employes of long standing, their dismissals were the direct result of Arnold's determination to break up the union.

British to Study Plan To Fortify Capetown

Capetown, May 22 (AP).—The question of fortifying Capetown Harbor with a view to safeguarding the alternative route to the East will be discussed with the British government by Oswald Pirow, South African minister of defense, who sailed for London today.

(In the House of Commons at London yesterday Lieut. Comdr. R. T. H. Fletcher, Laborite, urged studying the advisability of developing the route to the East around the Cape of Good Hope, in view of probable difficulty of controlling the Mediterranean in case of war with Italy.)

Fiorenza's Mother Testifies in Tears

New York, May 22 (AP).—Linked to the murder of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton by a slender piece of twine, John Fiorenza today listened to his mother tearfully describe him as an unusually quiet youth who imagined he heard the doorbell ringing when it was not.

The State closed its case against the 24-year-old apprentice upholsterer, accused of assaulting and strangling the dark-eyed author in her apartment on April 10, with the testimony of two twine dealers and an assistant district attorney.

The twine dealers, neither of whom qualified as a scientific expert on the subject, testified that the 13-inch piece of cord found under Mrs. Titterton's body was of the type used almost exclusively by upholsterers.

One of them, Edward H. Ruthenberg, of the Atlantic Excelsior Co., added it was "similar" to the twine his firm sold to the shop where Fiorenza was employed.

Boys' Club Fund Drive to Continue

The drive for funds for the Metropolitan Boys' Clubs will continue until the goal of $135,000 is reached, it was announced yesterday by James E. Colliflower, president of the club, at a meeting at the Willard Hotel.

More than $41,000 already has been donated, it was reported at the luncheon yesterday.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, spoke to the group at the luncheon, telling of future plans for the drive. He praised the manner in which Washington residents have received collectors for the drive.

Latest figures from the police canvass were: No. 1 Precinct, $675; No. 2, $1,980; No. 3, $1,038; No. 4, $330; No. 5, $500; No. 6, $733; No. 7, $679; No. 8, $366; No. 9, $144; No. 10, $726; No. 11, $138; No. 12, $408; Women's Bureau, $34; Detective Bureau, $71; Traffic Division, $150; Harbor Precinct, $45.

3 in Detroit Fined $20,000 In Bank Frauds

Trio Convicted of Falsifying Reports 13 Months Before 2 Crashes.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 22.—Judge Patrick T. Stone imposed fines totaling $20,000 upon three former bankers convicted on charges of making false reports concerning the condition of two banks 13 months before the closing of two of Detroit's leading banking institutions.

After denying a motion to set aside their conviction, Judge Stone imposed fines of $10,000 upon John R. Bodde and $5,000 against Edwin J. Eckert, former officers of the Peoples Wayne County Bank, which later was merged with now closed First National Bank of Detroit. Herbert R. Wilkin, former vice president and cashier of the Union Industrial Trust & Savings Bank of Flint, was fined $5,000. The court set aside the conviction of Donald N. Sweeny, another former officer of the Peoples Wayne County Bank.

Executives Should Pay.

Bodde and Eckert were convicted of signing a $145,000 trustee note that was carried on the bank's books as a cash item, although the money was used to purchase stock in its holding company, the Detroit Bankers Co. In assessing the fines against Bodde and Eckert, the court said members of the Peoples Wayne County Bank executive committee should pay them.

"They are the men," Judge Stone said, "who got these men into this difficulty, and they ought to come forward now."

The charge against Wilkin alleged that a report on December 31, 1931, was falsified to conceal $600,000 in bills payable by a "sham transaction" increasing deposits a like amount. To Wilkin, Judge Stone said:

"I would give you at least two years in prison except that I am informed that you are the sole support of your aged father and mother."

Among 34 Indicted.

Bodde, Eckert, Sweeny and Wilkin were among 34 bankers indicted following the banking collapse in 1933. Three others tried last year were acquitted. In addition to setting aside Sweeny's conviction, Judge Stone ruled the Government had not presented sufficient evidence to warrant trying Robert O. Lord and James L. Walsh, former officers of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., holding company for the Flint Bank of which Wilkin was an officer.

Postal Aid Pay Rise Refused by House

By the Associated Press.

The House refused by a 106-to-22 vote yesterday to approve a boost in the salaries of the four Assistant Postmasters General from $9,000 a year to $10,000.

The proposed increase was tacked on by the Senate as a rider to a departmental bill authorizing expenditures for the Postoffice's expenses in sending out bonus payments.

Despite a contention by Chairman Mead (Democrat), New York, of the Postoffice Committee, that refusal to agree to the rider would threaten payment of the bonus because of delay in sending the measure back to the Senate, the combined Democratic and Republican opposition, led by Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, of the Appropriations Committee, and Minority Leader Snell, of New York, prevailed overwhelmingly.

The four present Assistant Postmasters General are William W. Howes, Harllee Branch, Clinton B. Eilenberger and Smith W. Purdum.

During the day a bill to bring all first, second and third class postmasters into the civil service and make extensive changes in the manner in whch they are selected was introduced by Representative Bacon (Republican), New York.

Cattle Men Aided By Pact, Says Sayre

Denver, May 22 (AP).—Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, today carried to Western cattlemen the Administration's answer to charges that the Canadian trade agreement reduced the price of Western beef.

Monday, F. E. Mollin, of Denver, secretary of the American Livestock Association, protested to President Roosevelt against imports of cattle under the Canadian-United States trade agreement, which, he said, had beaten down the market price in the United States.

"The reduction," Sayre said in the address prepared for delivery before the chamber of commerce, "is well known to have resulted from other causes. In 1935 supplies of livestock had been seriously depleted by the 1934 drought, and prices were unusually high. It was inevitable that there should be an increase in supplies and a drop in prices in 1936.

"Far from being injured by the Canadian agreement, our cattlemen are directly benefited by it. The agreement is reopening markets for the sale of many American products in Canada, and thus, by increasing purchasing power on the part of American workmen, will create an expanding domestic market for American beef."

Woman's Body Found; Sheriff Hints Murder

Gun Found Beside Charred Remains on Mountain; Arms, Legs Broken.

By the Associated Press.

Chesterfield, N. H., May 22.—The charred and broken body of an unidentified woman, apparently slain, according to Sheriff Frank J. Bennett, by setting fire to her oil-soaked body, was found today on lonely Mount Wantastiquet.

A .22-caliber pistol found a few feet from the body, one shoe blackened by smoke, and possibly her teeth, Acting Medical Examiner Morris Robertson asserted, were the only clews to the woman's identity. She was between 20 and 40 years old, he estimated.

Medical and police authorities agreed the woman's death "could not possibly have been suicide."

Forest fire fighters discovered the body in a wild section about 6 or 7 miles from this village. The arms and legs were broken.

Bennett said a forest fire which started Wednesday was ignited by the woman's flaming body.

Fire fighters came upon the gruesome sight in a slight depression on the mountain, but Dr. Robertson declared there were no cliffs nor ledges from which the woman could have fallen and sustained broken bones.

There were no footprints leading to or from the scene, he added.

Later Constable Lyle Blake reported he found nine exploded .22-caliber revolver shells, a gallon gasoline can, and other articles near the body, including what he believed to be a man's tie clasp. Two compacts, several buttons from a woman's dress, 99 cents in change, and the clasp of a woman's handbag also were found.

Girl Pilot Saved Was State's Ward

Boston, May 22 (AP).—From records of Massachusetts division of child guardianship came tonight the tragic story of Sue Limo, 22-year-old domestic, who battled an aviator high over Boston harbor yesterday in an attempt to hurl herself to death.

Sue, the record showed, is the daughter of a suicide father, Albert Limo, who killed her mother, Matilda, when she was only 3 years old.

The pretty, chestnut-haired girl identified herself to Dr. Riley H. Guthrie, chief of the hospital's staff, only after hours of gentle, but persistent questioning.

To police last night she had insisted she was Jane Doe, the name under which she booked her airplane ride yesterday with Pilot Charles Sutherland.

Sutherland, espying hre with one foot already on the wing of his plane, grasped her by her hair and, while his machine whriled madly about, finally subdued her and brought her safely to the Boston airport.

As a State ward the girl went to school in Carlisle and later went to live with an aunt in Watertown. She has since worked as a domestic.

Dr. Guthrie said Miss Limo would be held at the hospital for at least 10 days. He described her condition as "mentally depressed."

Seven Members Of Secret Unit Held as Slayers

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 22. — Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea said today he formally would charge seven men, members of the "Black Legion," a secret vigilante society, with the "ritual slaying" of Charles A. Poole, 32-year-old WPA worker.

Sixteen men, all of whom Police Inspector John I. Navarre said were members of the black-robed organization, were held for investigation. Four of them have confessed, he said, that they took part in the abduction and slaying of Poole, whose body was found May 13 in a roadside ditch near here.

The four, he said, are Harvey Davis, 38, a "colonel" in the society; Dayton Dean 36, Irvin Lee and Urban Lipps.

With them when Poole was slain, Navarre said, were George C. Johnson, Paul R. Edwards and Edgar Baldwin.

McCrea said he would ask murder warrants for the seven Saturday.

Navarre said Dean confessed he fired two shots into Poole's body, that Lee had admitted firing at the victim, and that Davis had confessed he directed the shooting, while Lipps admitted he was a witness.

"I planned the expedition only as a whipping party," Prosecutor McCrea quoted Davis as saying in a formal statement following his confession. The "party" was planned, Davis said, because two relatives of Poole's wife had said he beat and kicked her.

McCrea said Dean admitted shooting Poole, who had been lured to the lonely spot by a ruse, as Poole knelt before his captors.

"I shot him; I thought it was my job, according to our discussion," McCrea said Dean told him.

Davis and Dean are employes of the Detroit Public Lighting Commission. Most of the others held are factory workers. Davis came to Detroit from Lexington, Ky., 16 years ago; Lipps, from Pucatunna, Miss., 18 months ago.

Navarre said 34 other members of the organization were being sought as having attended a meeting of the "Wolverine Republican League" at which the abduction of Poole was planned.

Headquarters of the league, which is not connected with the Republican Party, were raided today and a dozen firearms, a large quantity of ammunition, two daggers and several black robes and hoods, bearing a skull and crossbones insignia, were confiscated.

"As the story was told me by the men under arrest," Navarre said, "a meeting of some 50 members of the society was called by Davis the night of May 12. Prior to the meeting Hershell Gill and Lowell Rushing, relatives of Poole's wife, told Davis Poole had kicked and beaten his wife."

Davis asked the members what they planned to do, Navarre related.

"Some of the boys yelled 'let's beat him up' and others yelled 'let's stripe him'—that means tar and feather him," the inspector quoted Lipps as saying.

Lee and Dean volunteered to bring Poole to the meeting, which they did, by pretending they wanted to get him to play on a baseball team, Navarre said.

"The meeting then broke into a bedlam," the police inspector said, "and members were told to get in their cars and follow Davis' car."

Because of confusion that resulted when a draw bridge, over which the motorcade had to pass to get to the scene of the party, only two cars actually reached the scene, Navarre said.

"After they all had a drink Davis ordered Poole pulled out of the car, saying, 'Poole, you beat up your wife for the last time,'" the inspector related.

Navarre said Dean opened fire with two weapons, a .38-caliber and a .45-caliber revolver.

"I didn't even have to aim. I was only five or six feet away," Dean was quoted as saying.

Mrs. Poole, to whom a daughter was born the day after Poole was slaim, denied today that Poole ever had beaten or kicked her.

Navarre said some of the men held had expressed fear that their statements would lead to reprisals by other members of the Black Legion, which they told him had branches throughout the country. They refused to name other cities in which the organization is active, saying its motto was "secrecy always," he said.

Plea of Britain Fails, Kidnaper Dies on Coast

Mackay and Companion Are Hanged for Abducting Board Members.

By the Associated Press.

San Quentin, Calif., May 22.—Great Britain's repeated efforts to save the life of Alexander MacKay, subject of that government condemned as a kidnaper, failed today as he dropped to his death through the trap of San Quentin Prison's gallows.

He was one of three prisoners hanged in California today.

MacKay and his companion, Joseph Kristy, paid the penalty for slugging the warden of San Quentin and escaping with four prison board members as hostages.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, Sir Ronald Lindsay, ambassador to Washington, and local British consuls petitioned in vain for clemency for MacKay. The courts declined to intervene. Gov. Frank F. Merriam granted two reprieves but refused further action.

MacKay, 29, and Kristy, 27, were hustled to the gallows this morning, their hands strapped to their sides.

The Briton called out "so long" to his attorney, Melvin Belli, who was among the 100 witnesses. Kristy said nothing. They dropped through the traps simultaneously at 10:05 a. m. and were pronounced dead ten minutes later.

Frank C. Sykes, prison board chairman who was among those kidnaped, did not respond to MacKay's written invitation to witness the execution "in the hope * * * that the sight of Kristy and myself going through the trap * * * shall make you feel kindlier disposed toward the poor devils who come before you to receive justice in the future."

Spoilsmen Rule New Deal, Says Babcock Book

Republicans Plan to Use Pamphlet; A. F. G. E. Leaders Protest.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, announced yesterday that he is the author of a pamphlet attacking the Government personnel policies of the Administration. The pamphlet is to be distributed during the Presidential campaign by the Republican national committee.

His book is known as "Bulletin No. 3." It is of 16 illustrated pages and tells "how the merit system is being wrecked by spoilsmen of the Roosevelt Administration."

"Never before in the history of the Nation has an Administration, even before the passage of the civil service act, handed out jobs to political cohorts in payment for political services on such a grand scale," the employe leader writes in the introduction.

The A. F. G. E. lists more than 31,000 members throughout the country. The rival Government employe organization, the National Federation of Federal Employes, claims more than 60,000. The former is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and has almost doubled its membership in the past year.

Luther C. Steward and Miss Gertrude McNally, N. F. F. E. president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, periodically during the last two years have assailed the alleged "spoilsmanship" policies of the Democrats. Thus, with the issuance of Babcock's Republican bulletin, both the presidents of the two major Government employe groups (excepting, of course, the Postoffice Department employe organizations) appear now to be definitely anti-Administration.

Whether the rank and file of the members indorse their presidents' views is another question. So far no protests have been heard from N. F. F. E. members over the attacks of Steward and Miss McNally on the Administration since 1933.

A. F. G. E. members, however, were quick to express opinions on the latest move of their president. Members of the A. F. G. E. Executive Council last night deplored Babcock's bulletin as tending to throw the organization into partisan politics.

Four of the 16 council members issued a statement reading:

"Any partisan political statement issued by any officer of the American Federation of Government Employes is without official authorization and must not be regarded as representing the views of the federation, as it is strictly a non-partisan organization."

The statement was signed by Cecil E. Custer, Ira Y. Bain, G. Carroll Dimond and Michael D. Schaefer.

No action was taken on the Babcock pamphlet at a meeting of the District council of his organization last night.

Babcock last night denied that he wrote the bulletin as president of the A. F. G. E. He emphasized that he was merely invoking his "right of free speech as an American citizen and taxpayer."

Annapolis Accepts 2 in Montgomery

Two members of Company F, Fifth Battalion, Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, of Rockville, have passed the examination for entrance to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, it was announced yesterday by Capt. Ralph M. King, commander of the company.

The two successful applicants are Charles Abert, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Bache Abert, of Rockville, and C. Francis Clagett, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester F. Clagett, of Potomac.

Abert is a direct descendant of Benjamin Franklin on his father's side. His great-grandfather, Richard Bache, was the first postmaster of the City of Philadelphia. He is 19 years old and graduated at Gonzaga High School at Washington, later attending Columbia Preparatory School in Washington. He has been in the Marine company for one year.

Clagett likewise is a member of a noted American family, being a great-great-grandson of Richard Henry Lee, Revolutionary War hero and signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was graduated at Bullis Preparatory School in Silver Spring last year. Like Abert, he is 19 years and has been a member of the company but one year.

D. C. Budget

a ban from the Comptroller General's Office.

The President made it clear that he has not changed his mind a bit regarding the fairness of the Budget Bureau recommendations as to a $5,700,000 lump sum and other items despite repudiation of this budget by the House sub-committee headed by Representative Thomas L. Blanton.

He explained that the Senate-House deadlock has not been brought formally to his attention, but he intimated he would welcome an opportunity to step in and bring pressure to bear upon the Blanton sub-committee through House leaders.

Membesr of the Senate sub-committee were distinctly cheered by the President's indorsement of their insistence upon appropriations equal to Budget Bureau estimates. They had been advised privately heretofore that he was particularly interested in seeing that Federal contribution nd the public health appropriations left intact by Congress.

Blanton took two minutes on the House floor to repeat that House conferees will not "give into the Senate any more on fundamentals." He stated he would place in the appendix of the Congressional Record today "ample evidence for knocking character education out of the school curriculum."

The Texan, visibly subdued in manner, denied he had told Senate conferees that he had voted for five unconstitutional measures requested by the President and would follow his lead no longer.

"That was a malicious lie," he said.

N. Y. 'Old Guard' Faction Assails Leadership at Cleveland Parley.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 22.—The New York "Old Guard"—for years the dominant force in the Socialist Party—brought to the Socialist National Convention today its fight against the Leftist leadership of Norman Thomas.

Characterizing the present principles of the party and the policies of the Thomas leadership as a "cowardly compromise with Bolshevism," Louis Waldman, New York labor lawyer and "Old Guard" leader, said the proposal of Earl Browder for a Socialist-Communist political "united front" in the 1936 campaign was a "logical consequence" of the activities of the Leftists who now control the Socialist Party.

Almost at the same time Browder, secretary general of the Communist Party, renewed his plea in a statement for a joint Socialist-Communist ticket in the coming campaign.

Browder came here to seek permission to appear before the Socialist convention. His written request for this permission has not been acted upon by the national executive committee.

Thomas and other Leftist leaders—who said they favor local "united fronts" on specific issues with the Communists, such as May Day demonstrations—have announced their opposition to any national plan of common action and to any political "united front."

After re-assailing the Leftist declaration of principles adopted by the Socialists two years ago at Detroit, and criticizing the national executive committee for its "interference" in the New York State dispute between the "Old Guard" and the Leftists, Waldman declared:

"From the conduct of the left-wing leadership, Browder's presence here has more real reason than ours.

"The leftwing leadership is scared of Browder's spilling the beans. They had hoped he would keep quiet until after the convention. But apparently, Browder does not trust the Thomas leadership and he came to Cleveland to force the issue before the convention."

Second Policeman Seizes Liquor Car After Dual Chase

A policeman narrowly escaped injury last night when his motorcycle was driven from Bladensburg road northeast by a liquor-laden car.

By a coincidence, C. H. Gould was no sooner put out of the chase in that fashion than another motorcycle officer, R. E. Burton, heard the commotion and joined the pursuit.

At Minnesota avenue and Sheriff road northeast the driver of the rum machine eluded the policeman by taking to the railroad tracks. He then halted the car and escaped on foot with an accomplice.

The fugitives employed a smoke screen in an unsuccessful attempt to get away with the whisky. Some 42 five-gallon cans of liquor were seized. The rum-runners were seeking to evade paying whisky taxes.

Disabled U. S. Destroyer To Be Decommissioned

Western High Is Half Painted; Fund Shortage Stops Workers

District's Financial Troubles Reach Classrooms; Students Watch Painters Leave as Carpenters Continue to Erect Scaffolding.

The District's financial troubles, centering around the uncertain status of its appropriation bill, visited Western High School yesterday and left behind a building half coated with bright, buff paint.

From classrooms in which they learn that Congress controls the District of Columbia, they watched painters clean off their brushes, then abandon their scaffolds. They didn't know there was an object lesson in the reason.

The painters, who have been dressing Western High's interior and exterior for several weeks, were leaving their jobs because there was no more money for paint. And there won't be any more until Congress passes the appropriation bill, William A. Draper, engineer in the District repair shop, announced.

Some of the classrooms are newly painted and some still have walls with the dirt accumulated over a period of several years. Part of the school's front is finished—the rest isn't. Worst eyesore of all, in the opinion of the students, is the elaborate web of scaffolding which litters the school's imposing portico.

Ironically, carpenters, without notice to stop working, continued to put up scaffolds for a paint job that can't be completed until there is money. "And this lumber won't come down until the painting is done," they told anxious pupils.

Draper said "it wouldn't be safe" to continue the job until appropriations are assured. He is depending on a $100,000 "immediately available" item in the bill to cover the work. Money from this item, he said, would make possible the purchase of paint and the hiring of labor right away, without awaiting the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1.

"I'm sorry we have to leave a job like that," he commented. "We finished the auditorium—that's where the commencement will be. But unless the bill is passed soon, I'm afraid we'll have to leave the scaffolding on the porch up for a while."

New school buildings, Draper added, can draw from a "construction" fund for necessary repairs and painting, but for older buildings, such as Western, a special item in the budget is required.

Model of Plane Is on Exhibition At Catholic U.

Original of Craft, Built at School, Is at Langley Field for Tests.

An 18-inch model of an airplane constructed by Dr. Louis Crook, professor of aeronautics at Catholic University, with the assistance of laboratory helpers and aeronautic engineering students, was shown last night at the university as part of the school's annual three-day "open school" exhibit.

The full-sized plane, a two-seated biplane, powered by a 150 horsepower motor, with specially constructed trailing flaps and slots to give the wings extra lift, is at Langley Field, Va., for testing.

If the performance of the model of the plane as tested in the school's 40-mile wind tunnel last night is an indication, the plane should survive all Army tests. It is believed capable of a speed of from 150 to 200 miles per hour.

Besides the aeronautics exhibit, demonstrations have been arranged for the other science departments. The open-school exhibit, principally of the equipment used in the classroom, is staged acquaint parents of the students with the work done at the school.

Labor Bureau Reports Work, Pay Roll Gains

Miss Perkins Says Industry Has Not Experienced Spring Slump.

Secretary Frances Perkins yesterday reported that business was coming through this spring without the usual seasonal slump, with both pay rolls and jobs increasing.

Her report said:

That 225,000 workers had been added to pay rolls during April and that pay rolls had increased $4,200,000.

That the gain in factory pay rolls brought the pay roll index to where it stood in October, 1930; that in only five Aprils during the last 17 years had employment increased.

That 1,053 industrial plants in the District of Columbia had 34,791 persons on their pay rolls, an increase of 4.9 per cent in the month, with a total weekly pay roll of $787,694, an increase of 1.8 per cent over March.

That the durable goods industries were making gains of "major importance," especially so in furnace steel works, rolling mills, automobiles, electrical machinery, foundries and sawmills.

That the employment index in durable goods was 77 per cent above the low of March, 1933.

That quarrying, private building construction, dyeing and cleaning were showing "sharp seasonal gains."

"Increases in employment in several industries have raised the April level to the highest point recorded in recent years," she read. "Hotel employment exceeded the maximum shown since October, 1931. Employment in the power and light companies reached the highest point reported since January, 1932. The metal lines are back to June, 1931."

The Secretary said that "factory employment is back to 1930." She referred to gains in "the interesting industries"—in locomotives, shipbuilding, steam and electric car building, in aircraft and automobiles.

Discussing decreases, she said "with the exception of the seasonal decline of 30.9 per cent in employment in the cottonseed oil, cake and meal industry, the major declines were not pronounced."

Police Study Hanging Of Boy, 10, at Rochester

Rochester, N. Y., May 22 (AP).—Police investigated tonight the unexplained hanging of a 10-year-old boy in the attic of his home.

Found late today by his father, Milton F. Lum, prominent real estate operator, the boy, George F., apparently had been dead two hours.

Described as a brilliant student, George was two grades ahead for his age in grammar school. He was said to be of cheerful disposition.

The father said the piece of clothes line used was of a type he could not recall having seen about the house.

New York Voters Disavow Legislature on Child Labor

Special to The Post.

New York, May 22.—Voters of New York State do not agree with the action of their Legislature in refusing to ratify the Child Labor Amendment to the Federal Constitution a few weeks ago.

This fact was made known here today by the Institute of Public Opinion, which released the New York results of a Nation-wide poll of voters on the child labor issue.

The vote in the Empire State was:

Per cent favoring amendment 63%

Per cent opposing amendment 37%

The wording of the question asked in the poll was based on that of the Child Labor Amendment. It read: "Do you favor an amendment to the Constitution giving Congress the power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under 18?"

The bill to bring the amendment to a vote on the floor of the New York Legislature was killed by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Supreme Court Gets Harper's Bank Deal Suit

Tribunal Asked to Uphold Group Purchase of District's Stock.

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday to rule there was a difference between the "rigging of markets, stock pools and other such practices" and an oral agreement among officers and directors of a national bank here to maintain the price of the bank's stock by buying and selling on the Washington Stock Exchange.

Robert N. Harper, former president of the District National Bank which failed to reopen after the 1933 banking holiday, made this request in his $17,600 suit against other former officers and directors of the bank.

Quoting several sections of the securities and exchange act of 1934, which made pool and stock price rigging operations a crime, Harper argued his appeal presented "a question of general national importance which has not been, but should be settled by this court."

Harper said former officers of the bank agreed in 1928 to "maintain a reasonable market price for the capital stock" by preventing the dumping of large blocks of the bank's stock.

Each Contributed $250.

He said the bank officials contributed $250 each and the account was in the name of one officer, Charles C. Rogers, while another, Christian J. Gockeler, was given authority to buy and sell the bank stock on the exchange.

When additional funds were needed in 1932 for this purpose, Harper said he and Gockeler obtained a $17,600 loan from the Commercial National Bank here, putting up 90 shares of the District Bank stock and personal securities Harper owned.

When both banks closed later, the Commercial receiver threatened sale of Harper's securities to pay the note and Harper brought suit to collect from his former associates for the "joint adventure."

He appealed from a 3-to-2 decision by the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in which the majority ruled the agreement was to fix "a fictitious price on the bank's stock." The majority ruled the contract was not enforceable.

Minority Opinion Cited.

The minority said the agreement was not to "improperly advance the price of the stocks," but was "supporting the market against unusual conditions."

Asking the highest court to find the agreement valid, Harper argued that it protected "the bank, its stockholders, depositors and borrowers, and the general banking and other interests of the community."

2 Injured as Car, Bicycle Collide

Two boys were injured, one of them critically, when the bicycle on which they were riding crashed into the side of a moving automobile at Connecticut avenue and Warner street, Kensington, Md., yesterday afternoon.

William Kelly, 13, of Capitol View, Md., was taken unconscious to Washington Sanitarium at Takoma Park, Md., where he was found to have suffered a possible fractured skull and internal injuries. His condition was said to be critical. William's brother, John Kelly, 10, who had been riding on the handle-bars of the bicycle, escaped with cuts and bruises on the arm and head.

The automobile involved in the collision was operated by Mrs. Sybelle A. Wolfe, of Capitol View, a friend and relative of the Kelly family. A passenger in the car was Mrs. Jerry Kelly, aunt of the Kelly boys.

Leeds Will Wed During Cruise In West Indies

Tinplate Heir Saved Girl From Sea 6 Years Ago at Atlantic City.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 22.—William B. Leeds, heir to the tinplate fortune, tomorrow will marry Olive Hamilton, the girl he rescued from the ocean six years ago near Atlantic City, his secretary said today.

Other than the information that Leeds and Miss Hamilton, of Pittsburgh, would be married at sea, on the Leeds' yacht Moana, his secretary had learned no details, she said. The yacht is cruising in the West Indies.

"There are seven guests aboard," she volunteered, "but Mr. Leeds' reply to a radiogram I sent him yesterday didn't say who would perform the ceremony or at what hour it would occur."

She believed the two had been engaged "for six or eight months, anyway."

Leeds, former husband of Princess Xenia of Russia, rescued Miss Hamilton from the sea at a time when she was working as a telephone operator at Atlantic City.

Father Learns News.

Pittsburgh, May 22 (AP).—William J. Hamilton, unemployed steel worker, quietly received the news today that his daughter, Olive Hamilton, will wed the wealthy William B. Leeds tomorrow.

Hamilton, recovering from an injury received in a fall from a tank at a slag products plant three weeks ago, said he did not know any of the details of his daughter's pending marriage.

He said she left home several years ago and became a telephone operator in an Atlantic City hotel.

Hamilton lost his job a couple of years ago with a steel company and later worked at the slag plant until he fell and injured his back.

Pan-American Site Proposal Delayed

Because of a difference of opinion among District and Federal officials, the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds yesterday failed to act upon a bill proposing that the Pan-American annex be located on lower Eighteenth street instead of at the intersection of Constitution and Virginia avenues.

The new site was indorsed by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, speaking personally, and by Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission. It was explained by A. E. Demaray, of the National Park Service, upon behalf of Secretary Ickes.

District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and Dan I. Sultan said they preferred the original site. Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, stated he has no preference between the sites.

New Opposition To Freight Rate Heard by I.C.C.

Commission to Hear Final Arguments on Surcharge Extension Today.

By the Associated Press.

New objections to the extension of emergency freight surcharges scheduled to expire July 1 were raised by shipping representatives yesterday at hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association and the Minneapolis Traffic Association are expected to offer final arguments for shipping interests today, after which Class 1 railroads, urging that the surcharges be made permanent, will be heard in rebuttal.

After hearing contentions against continuing the surcharges on iron ore and anthracite, the commission received arguments yesterday by attorneys for packing companies, malt manufacturers and other shippers.

Speaking for the Cudahy Packing Co., Nuel D. Belnap, of Chicago, asserted that carriers had given "little real consideration" whether rates under the surcharge arrangement were "fair and reasonable."

R. D. Rynder, representing Swift & Co.; George P. Boyle, representing Central Packers, and Paul E. Blanchard, representing Armour & Co., all of Chicago, also opposed the extension.

Arguing for Iowa packers, Warren H. Wagner, of Washington, said that packing houses were shifting their traffic to trucks "by leaps and bounds" because of the charges.

H. C. Ames, of Washington, said on behalf of the Manufacturing Chemists Association and the Pulp and Paper Traffic League, that no permanent extension was justified because of the emergency character of the charges.

The higher levies went into effect in April, 1935. "No emergency can be regarded as a permanent proposition," Ames declared.

Opposition also was expressed by R. D. Waller, of Dubuque, Iowa, representing the National Door Manufacturers Association, and J. J. Schmicher, of Chicago, representing malt producers in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois, New York, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Dr. Roger Adams Wins Willard Gibbs Medal

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—The 1936 Willard Gibbs medal, one of the prime American scientific awards, was bestowed tonight on Dr. Roger Adams, of the University of Illinois, "for outstanding contributions to synthetic organic chemistry and conspicuous achievements as a teacher of chemistry."

The ceremony was held at a dinner of the Chicago section, American Chemical Society, celebrating also the twenty-fifth anniversary of the award, which has gone to international leaders in science. The first medal was presented to Svante Arrhenius, Sweden's great pioneer in electrolysis.

Dr. Townsend Ready for Jail; Assails Inquiry

Pension Leader Wants His Typewriter in Cell, to 'Burn Way Out.'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 22.—Dr. F. E. Townsend, colorful in a borrowed suit of blue and white pajamas, announced today from a bed at his old-age pension headquarters here that he would not mind going to jail if "they send my typewriter along with me."

The former California health officer was commenting on the possible contempt citation he faces because he stalked from a Congressional committee hearing room yesterday. He said he would "take his ease" here until he hears from Congress.

His observations included:

Over the committee inquiry—"I was getting near the exploding point. It was enough to make a saint boil over—and I never professed to be a saint. If they want to cite me for contempt, I'll go over there and tell them just how much contempt I do have for the whole proceedings. But I won't face further investigation by the Bell committee and I won't face an investigation by Congress itself, or by any group in which there are men of that type.

spend the rest of my days there."

Wants Typewriter in Jail.

About a jail sentence—"Whatever it is, I'm ready for it. But if I'm sent to jail, I hope they send my typewriter along with me. It's as guilty as I am, and I may need it to burn my way out. I'm no speed artist on it, but I can make it go."

About the political effect of the investigation—"I predict that the present Administration has committed suicide by its unfair and unjust attitude in connection with this investigation."

About prospects for his movement—"We'll have at least 150 persons friendly to the Townsend movement elected to Congress this fall and we'll have several Senate seats. Unfortunately most of the Senators don't come up for reelection this time. But we'll make a clean sweep west of the Mississipi. We can command some 30,000,000 votes now without question.

About Representative C. E. Hoffman, who was active in the committee inquiry—"Mr. Hoffman is just a Michigan man who has the jitters because he knows he's going to get beat in his home district this fall."

No Amalgamation Planned.

Yesterday, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, of the Share-Our-Wealth organization of the late Huey Long, said he was joining with Townsend in a "Nation-wide protest against this communistic dictatorship in Washingtin."

Of that "joining," Townsend said. "There will be no amalgamation of the Townsend movement with any other. That was simply a friendly gesture Mr. Smith was kind enough to offer yesterday. He tells me that there is an intense political sympathy throughout the South for our movement, and that his organization's members will vote for what we stand for. If there's any political significance in that yau can take it for what it's worth."

Plane Bombs Slip; Land Near Homes

Sacramento, Calif., May 22 (U.P.).—Two 100-pound bombs, shipped from their racks on a United States Army plane and fell 4,000 feet to explode without serious damage in the yards of two residences at Carmichael, east of Sacramento, today.

The bombs contained only a minimum amount of black powder, a circumstance which undoubtedly prevented widespread damage and deaths.

One of the heavy missiles landed 100 feet from the home of Maynard Rowland. Inside the home, Mrs. Rowland was entertaining four guests. None was injured. Ambrose Jerguson, a ranch worker, was within 50 feet of the place were the other bomb exploded when it landed on the property of Edgar Miller. Jerguson escaped injury.

Lieut. N. F. Timper, of the Thirty-first Bombardment Squadron, Hamilton Field, reported a defect in the rack mechanism permitted the bombs to slip into space. Maj. Harold D. Smith, commander of the squadron, said a formal inquiry would be conducted. He refused other information.

Workers in Venezuela Close General Strike

Maracaibo, Venezuela, May 22 (AP).—Work was resumed in Maracaibo today after a short-lived general strike which union officials said was called against instructions. Union leaders in Caracas disclaimed all responsibility for the activities of labor groups here. Workers went back to their jobs under a Government guarantee of protection.

Reports from the capital said revision of the social defense law (making profession or suggestion of communistic doctrines a criminal offense) has been agreed upon. These sources also said changes in the congressional membership (which labor leaders declared was "handpicked" by the late dictator, Juan Vicente Gomez) has been promised.

Action on Townsend Delayed

out as a means of evading the issue."

"We have ample evidence that this walkout was planned weeks ago," he said.

He recalled a speech made by Townsend in California on May 13 in which the doctor was quoted as saying that he would tell the committee just what he wanted to tell it and that would be all.

Bell Favors Trial

"While we have taken no action," Bell said, "I personally am willing to recommend that the committee report to the House and recommend that Townsend be tried either before the House or before the District Supreme Court."

From another source it was reported that some members of the House, not on the committee, may demand action if the committee does not act.

Bell said that unless other members of the Townsend organization who are under subpena appear and testify he would favor making "certain correspondence" public. He said that James R. Sullivan, counsel for the committee, had made recommendations to the committee but he declined to say what the recommendations were.

Members of the Bell committee conferred with Speaker Byrns earlier in the day. Byrns later said that he believed the doctor's action "a plain case of contempt." He suggested that the House might pass a resolution, if the committee recommended it, turning the case over to the District court, where the physician could be indicted.

Downey Expects Charges.

Downey expressed the belief that the committee also was considering citing him for contempt because he had advised and counseled Townsend. He said he would make no statement unless he made it from the witness stand under oath. Asked what he would do if Townsend is jailed, he said:

"We will elyect a majority of Congress in November."

Downey said that since the beginning of the hearings contributions to the Townsend movement have fallen off very seriously in the East and Middle West, but that they are beginning to pick up again.

Townsend officials displayed telegrams received since the doctor walked out on the committee. One said:

"You have the profound adoration of eastern Massachusetts."

A message from San Antonio, Tex., said:

"We have watched with awe and consternation the progress of the inquisition to which you apparently have fallen the victim under your own beautiful banner of the free."

Will Announce for Congress.

J. Henry Peyton, of Los Angeles, telegraphed:

"We need more men like you, Mr. Lincoln and Father Coughlin to stand for the rights of the people. Announcing my candidacy for Congress tomorrow."

Peyton addressed Townsend as "Your Excellency."

The Townsend organization completed yesterday the moving of its headquarters from Washington to Chicago. The moving process had been under way several days.

Members of the committee which was attempting to decide what to do with the old-age pension advocate are, besides Bell, Representatives Ditter (Republican), Pennsylvania; Hollister (Republican), Ohio; Tolan (Democrat), California; Hoffman (Republican), Michigan; Collins (Republican), California; Gavagan (Democrat), New York, and Lucas (Democrat), Illinois.

Anti-Chain Bill To Fix Prices Awaits Debate

House Adopts Rule Giving 5-Hour Discussion to Proposal Tuesday.

Anti-chain store legislation, as embodied in the Robinson-Patman bills to prevent price discriminations between big and little retailers, was given precedence in the House for next Tuesday when the Rules Committee yesterday brought out a rule granting five-hour debate on the Patman proposal.

The House version of the Senate-approved legislation, introduced by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat) of Texas, would limit quantity discounts to chain store and other big buyers to those based on production costs. Price discriminations because of the size of an order would be prohibited and fake advertising and brokerage allowances also would be eliminated.

Authority to enforce the Act would be vested in the Federal Trade Commission.

Sponsors of the legislation announced their intention to eliminate from the bill the anti-basing point features, which would prohibit manufacturers from using the basing-point system of selling by which prices are fixed on mill costs, plus transportation to a given base point. This provision, not present in the Senate bill sponsored by Majority Leader Robinson, of Arkansas, has been strenuously opposed by manufacturers.

Patman told the committee his bill would have "no effect whatsoever" on retail distribution, and that it was only mildly anti-chain store.

"It is anti-chain store only insofar as it may deprive certain large corporate chains of certain privileges they are now enjoying that they are not entitled to enjoy as a matter of right and justice, and which they enjoy at the expense of their small competitors, whether chains or independent."

Patman said his bill is constitutional, because it conforms with the recent ruling of the Supreme Court in the Sugar Institute case.

Il Duce Reconsiders Ousting French Priest

Paris, May 22 (AP).—France's protest through her ambassador to Rome led Premier Mussolini today to reconsider an order expelling Mgr. Andre Jarousseau, veteran Catholic missionary, from Harar, Ethiopia.

The foreign office, meanwhile, asked the French minister at Addis Ababa to rush a complete report on the case on which to base further representations if necessary. The priest was accused of making "hostile demonstrations" against Italy.

Cotton Strikers Appeal to U. S. For Mediation

Arkansas Sharecroppers Charge 'Terrorism;' Ask Cummings Inquiry.

Memphis, Tenn., May 22.—Striking field workers, charging "terrorism" in the East Arkansas cotton country, appealed to the Federal Government today to intervene in their behalf.

Telegrams were sent Attorney General Cummings for a Department of Justice investigation and to Secretary Perkins requesting steps toward mediation.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, was asked to make an independent inquiry.

H. L. Mitchell, secretary to the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, addressed the appeals to Washington. He claims 3,000 cotton croppers are on strike.

Ed I. McKinney, Arkansas labor commissioner, said planters decline l his department's offer to attempt mediation. A deputy commissioner, Harry G. Malcom, advised that the planters assured him the situation was "not serious enough now for them to consider negotiations."

The strikers, heretofore paid $1 a day, are asking a wage increase to $1.50.

Completing a tour of the strike area last night, Dr. Sherwood Eddy, author and lecturer, charged Negro strikers were held in a newly constructed stockade near Warle, Ark. Eddy recently established a co-operative farm at Hillhouse, Miss., for a group of evicted Arkansas sharecroppers.

Sheriff Howard Curlin said there was no stockade, and "no Negro strikers are being held." Curlin said there was no evidence of a strike "and certainly no terrorism."

A Tenant Farmers Union attorney appearing for James M. Curtis, head of a Memphis unemployed group, asked that Will D. Lee, Memphis chief of police, be put under a peace bond.

Curtis, one of a group arrested a few days ago for picketing at Memphis in an effort to persuade laborers from crossing into Arkansas to replace strikers, charged he was threatened with "bodily harm."

Chief Lee was in Arkansas today on a fishing trip. Criminal Judge Tom Harsh continued the case, explaining, however, that the chief "is already under bond," by virtue of his office, "and subject to suit if he injures anyone."

Damages For Lynchings.

An important milestone in the struggle toward social justice has been passed almost without notice. A Louisiana sheriff has been ordered to pay $2,500 damages to the parents of a Negro boy for negligence in failing to prevent his lynching. Because the boy was killed in Louisiana and the parents resided in Arkansas, the case was tried in a Federal court. Had a State court considered the case, perhaps the Negroes would not have obtained such a favorable decision. However, it is significant to note that, Federal court or not, a jury composed entirely of white persons rendered the judgment.

This award of damages is reported to be the first of its kind on record. Evidence was produced at the trial showing that two of the sheriff's deputies assisted the lynchers. The judge ruled that the action of the deputies must be considered binding on the sheriff. The significance of the ruling centers in the fact that officers of the law are often responsible for lynchings, either through their bland disregard of mob rule or through actual connivance. Insofar as the twelve Louisiana jurymen can speak for the public, such neglect is now condemned as criminal. Further, there is a demand that offenders be made answerable not only to the State, but also to the persons injured by their dereliction.

The judgment re-emphasizes the responsibility of civil authority at times when lynch law would raise its head. As news of the verdict spreads through the byways, an appreciable improvement in the country's unenviable record of lynchings may be expected.

Prosperity And Armaments.

How real is the improvement that has taken place in the international economic situation during recent years?

The surface indications are plainly encouraging. In many of the leading countries the index of industrial production has shown a steady rise from the depths of the depression. The world as a whole has reached the 1929 level of production. Concurrently there has been a welcome decline in unemployment. But, as Harold B. Butler points out in his annual report as director of the International Labor Office, there is more than one fly in the ointment.

There is still, he says, a yawning gap between agricultural and industrial prices. Enormous stocks of money, for want of confidence in the economic situation, are lying idle. International trade, which took a spurt in 1934, showed little improvement during 1935. The dangerous trend toward self-sufficiency remains strong in many nations and will probably continue strong as long as the world is gripped by the fear of war. Above all there is the sorry fact that even the recovery that has taken place has been the result, in considerable measure, not of normal economic processes but of re-armament.

Obviously the building up of the world's armies, navies and air forces has given a fillip to many industries and has led to an increase in employment. But, as the I. L. O. director points out, the basis of a prosperity resting on the unstable foundation of re-armament is "hollow and unreal." "As a form of national expenditure," he adds, "it is sterile and unproductive."

Real and lasting prosperity can be achieved only in an atmosphere of peace, of political and economic disarmament. The continuance by the nations of their present policies of using up their substance to increase their defense forces to the utmost limit can lead only to disaster. And should war come, as Mr. Butler says, "the hopes of any real prosperity would be effectually destroyed for this generation, even if the present fabric of civilization survived."

About the only encouraging sign the head of the I. L. O. finds is the impulse given by the United States to a freer exchange of goods among nations. He is hopeful that it may mark the beginning of the "clearing of the jungle of artificial obstacles which stand in the way of full recovery." But whether the American lead, important and salutary as it is, will be followed depends on whether the light of peace can be kept alive in an atmosphere full of the poison gases of war.

Ready For Co-ordination.

The successful termination of protracted negotiations over payment of dismissal compensation to railway labor has removed a major obstacle to the execution of plans for unifying, consolidating or otherwise co-ordinating carrier facilities.

During his term of service as co-ordinator, Mr. Eastman's achievements have been largely confined to extension of Federal regulation to competing transportation agencies and to improving relations between the roads and their employes. The restrictive labor provisions of the emergency transportation act of 1933 have seriously hampered his efforts to effect economies in operation through joint action by competing carriers. Labor has been consistently hostile to such co-ordinating proposals, fearing loss of employment.

Moreover, the limitations imposed upon the right of the roads to dismiss workers or reduce their wages under the emergency legislation of 1933 have deprived railway managements of the full advantages that would ordinarily have resulted from unification and co-ordination of facilities. With the emergency act due to expire next month, the roads have feared enactment of even more drastic restrictions upon their right to cut labor costs. By agreeing voluntarily to pay a dismissal wage under certain conditions, they have also removed the dangerous Wheeler-Crosser bill from the legislative arena.

If Congress should vote to extend the co-ordinator's term of office, the chances of obtaining results will be much greater than if co-ordination plans are left entirely to the discretion of railway managements. As Mr. Eastman has pointed out, it is extremely difficult to secure effective action from railway executives of widely different views and temperaments, unless some outside governmental pressure is exerted. Furthermore, the unification or merger of competing transportation facilities is a matter that concerns the public as well as the roads. Plans must not be developed with sole regard for operating economies, important though such considerations actually are.

Mr. Eastman has consistently taken a well-balanced view of the complex and many-sided problems that have come before him as co-ordinator. He has urged the railway unions to abandon their short-sighted resistance to labor-saving devices that are essential to put the carriers upon a sounder earnings basis and provide future openings for employment. He has, at the same time, conceded the reasonableness of claims for compensation growing out of plans that involve extensive dismissal of employes. With this vexed question amicably settled by voluntary agreement, the co-ordinator is now free to press for those constructive improvements that his staff and the railways themselves have long had under consideration.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that Congress will see fit to extend his temporary office and give him an opportunity to make his preparatory labors effective.

Surface Solution Wanted.

The common-sense view that Washington's traffic difficulties will never be solved by any one stroke receives further support, at least by implication, in the report of the special House sub-committee set up to study the problem. A program containing 26 points has been submitted to the District Committee after careful study and extensive hearings. Principal recommendations include an increase in the police force, stricter regulation of pedestrians, a ban on left turns in congested areas and further staggering of Government employment hours together with a later opening bell for schools.

One conclusion in particular will appeal to the average Washington driver—that not more rules, but fewer, are needed. The length and confusion of the current list of driving regulations encourages disregard of the law. Observance may be expected to rise and accidents to fall if some simplification of the local traffic code can be effected. And the suggestion that lights above fire alarm boxes be given some other color than that flashed by traffic signals will meet with popular favor.

On one important point, however, the report can not escape criticism. Among its recommendations is a proposal for a study of subway possibilities in the city "at the end of three years." This is dodging the issue. If Washington continues to grow along its present lines of development, without making adequate provisions for parking automobiles off the streets, no amount of street widening or staggering of hours will give sufficient relief to drivers or pedestrians. In all probability, such temporizing as the committee recommends will make subways inevitable. And there are many objections to subways, not the least being the known fact that in the long run they tend only to increase congestion due to the centralization of building they invite.

Washington traffic is a problem demanding primarily surface, not underground, solution. But if the city is to be saved from costly underground transportation, careful planning as to the distribution of Government buildings and the storage of automobiles in the congested area is a first essential. The time to begin such planning is now. If a policy of waiting to see what happens is to be continued, the time for deliberation will soon pass and the issue will be resolved by conditions over which the city will then have little control.

Overplaying A Good Hand.

Townsendism has been so thoroughly exposed that only the most credulous now regard it as anything more than a scheme to line the pockets of its promoters. Nearly every witness before Representative Bell's investigating committee has added to the public contempt for this fanciful dream of $200-per-month pensions for everyone over 60 years of age. This being the case, it is the more difficult to understand why the committee resorted to persecution of the distracted founder of the O. A. R. P.

For the most part Mr. Bell's committee has rendered valuable service to the public. It has riddled the Townsend nostrum simply by asking questions. Since the probe began the organization on which the California doctor has been building his hopes has crumbled rapidly. If Dr. Townsend still believes that he "has the world by the tail," even he must admit that the "pull" is not so much "downhill" as he anticipated. For the doctor has assumed in the eyes of the public the role of a befuddled old man trying to make a fortune out of a half-baked idea.

As the committee probed deep into the activities of Dr. Townsend, however, it became infuriated. Was it especially annoyed by his plan to organize a new political party and threats from some of his followers that members of the committee would not return to Congress? At any rate, the committee refused to let the founder of O. A. R. P. present a statement until it could be scrutinized by the chairman. And its procedure in examining him was severely arbitrary. Even if the confused and pathetic doctor had been formally charged with crime, he would be entitled to the privilege of presenting his own version of the case.

Dr. Townsend was sufficiently "hard boiled" to justify the committee in making a rigorous examination. It is well for any witness to realize that he cannot hoodwink Congress. But committees defeat their own purpose when they stoop to practices that are unfair. These tactics are especially unfortunate in this case because they tend to make Dr. Townsend a martyr in the eyes of his followers, in spite of the fact that the mercenary character of his solicitude for the aged has been thoroughly exposed.

In planning its future strategy the committee may well demand that Dr. Townsend furnish it with all information pertinent to its inquiry. But any action that will tend to make him a victim of Congressional persecution is likely to enhance his prestige among his deluded followers and serve as a boomerang to the good work the committee has already done.

An Unfortunate Necessity.

The decision to raise the rates of duty on certain types of cotton textiles imported chiefly from Japan is a confession that the State Department has been unable to deal with the situation through the medium of gentlemen's agreements with Japanese exporters. It is unfortunate that we have found it necessary to resort to direct action that may invite retaliation on the part of an excellent customer. Japan provides the chief export outlet for American raw cotton. On the other hand, it is encouraging to discover that the Administration is prepared to deal with foreign trade problems in a realistic way, raising trade barriers when the situation calls for more protection as well as lowering them when the balance of advantage appears to favor such procedure.

While complaints of Japanese competition usually prove, upon close examination, to be greatly exaggerated, there is no doubt that low labor costs in Japan and excessive depreciation of the yen give Japanese manufactured goods a competitive advantage in the American markets. Although the area in which competition is active is very restricted, it is, nevertheless, quite devastating within that limited field. Consequently, there is justification for seeking relief in increased tariff rates, despite the rather embarrassing position in which it puts the State Department.

However, the surface inconsistency between our efforts to expand foreign trade by lowering tariff barriers, while raising them against Japan, is more apparent than real. Changes in comparative production costs during the last few years have greatly increased Japan's competitive advantages in this market, and thus reduced the protection afforded our domestic industries by existing duties. The adjustment of rates made necessary by such unexpected developments does not imply a wish to reduce the amount of our purchases from Japan, but merely a desire to neutralize her recently acquired competitive advantages.

Books And "Buses."

Haniel Long in the Southwest Review.

Recent investigations into what the public does with its spare money have yielded conclusions somewhat discouraging for anyone who is trying to sell books. Apparently the public tends more and more to pass up reading for motoring, outdoor sports, the radio, the motion picture and other forms of entertainment . . .

One recent survey revealed that among 100 American families with an average income of $1,700 a year, 47 families owned automobiles, while only 7 bought current books, and their total purchases in a twelvemonth amounted to 20 volumes. I am informed that if a publisher sells a book to two one-hundredths of 1 per cent of the population he has done well; and to sell a book of verse to one person out of 123,000 is phenomenal.

Corporate Tax Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Doughton corporate tax bill would have resulted not only in diminution of the Federal revenues but in an abandonment of the corporation tax itself which should in fact be perpetuated and perfected as the basic element in the Federal Internal Revenue structure. The personal income tax should be regarded as supplemental to the corporation tax which is not an income tax at all but is a duty imposed upon the operating profits of corporate business under the power to lay duties, imposts and excises vested in Congress by express terms of the original Constitution. The corporation tax has no legal or constitutional relation to the income tax amendment.

What the corporation tax requires to make it more productive is a little clean surgery.

First, the deduction of interest should be repealed. This does not mean that the Government tax corporate bonds or the interest on corporate bonds—it means that the Government in the computation and collection of the tax on operating profits (miscalled income) shall come ahead of bondholders just as it now comes ahead of shareholders.

Every dollar borrowed by a corporation on its bonds is, as expended, deducted in full in the form of operating, maintenance or capital expenditures, capital expenditures being deducted under the head of "allowances for depreciation." In other words, bond debts so far as the Government is concerned, are completely amortized out of operating revenues before the corporation tax is computed. And yet the Government indulges in the stupid practice of allowing the deduction of interest on capital debts, the principal of which has already been deducted as against the Government and this practice has been going on for 20 years without challenge from the high-priced experts hired to advise Congress and the Treasury on corporate tax policy and administration.

Second, depreciation accounts should be abolished. This action will prevent great frauds against the revenue. The cost of depreciable equipment should be deducted in full as and when paid. The Government gains nothing in the aggregate by having such deductions made in installments.

These rectifications in the corporate tax structure will greatly simplify tax accounting and computation both for the Government and the corporations and will permit a cut in the corporate tax rate to 10 per cent, or to such rate as will produce by an intelligent estimate $1,000,000,000 in annual revenue.

After the Government computes its tax it should exercise no concern with respect to the allocation of the residue of operating profits to salaries, interest, dividends or reserves. That should all be left to the corporate directors.

Circus Efficiency.

To the Editor of he Post—Sir: As one of the thousands who witnessed Barnum & Bailey's great show last Monday afternoon and the panic that followed due to a storm and terrific gale that treated the big top as a plaything, I wish to express my admiration for the great band of circus people who at a single command were ready for that emergency, and with super-human strength, it seemed, as one man held those great poles and vast tent from collapsing.

It will always remain a miracle to me that thousands were not killed and injured in that frenzied milling throng, and that their bloodcurdling screams did not cause the animals to stampede. It was due only, I'm sure, to the courage, patience and training of the army of circus people, as well as the police and firemen.

My grateful thanks to that circus hand who wrapped my little nephew, 7 years old, in gunny sacks to stop his quaking and shaking from fear and cold in the pouring rain. He was only one of many babies and children to whom such kindness was shown.

Crime Prevention Next.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the detection of criminals has reached a high efficiency, why not put the horse before the cart and have high efficiency in crime prevention? It has been stated that crime costs this country $15,000,000,000 a year—a pretty sum for the taxpayer. With out present methods in penal institutions, there are no beneficent results as criminals increase every year. Prison walls and punishment have not proved a deterrent. In fact, in many cases these institutions are crime-producing universities.

What are some of the causes of crime? Slums, with overcrowding, ignorance, poverty, not enough playgrounds, with boys falling into gangs. Why not abolish slums? Is it because of the invasion of property rights? If so, cannot the government make an adjustment with slum owners to co-operate in building houses which would yield the same rate of interest?

Added reasons against crime prevention are corrupt municipal politics in cities; boss politicians, ward heelers, and bogus criminal lawyers. Crime is not a thing apart like cancer. It is one of the manifestations of a complex set of forces in society. Just as disease has been withdrawn from the realm of quackery, so the cause of crime must be subjected to systematic attack of reason which we call scientific procedure.

The ways of prevention and modes of treatment to be made by highly trained men, capable to solve the enigmas of crime. Judges and lawyers who play a role in criminal justice have not a specialized training in criminal justice or its intricacies. We as citizens should work for a crime-cause civil service. Crime touches almost the whole structure of society, with the problem of treatment of those who have been convicted and the refitting of those men and women who are salvageable. This would mean reconstructing criminal law and penal methods, and sociological research. It is high time that the taxpaying public wake up. Bryce said public opinion is the salvation of a democracy.

"The Rape Of Ethiopia."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The first act of the tragedy, "The Rape of Ethiopia," has been enacted. Italy took some seven months to play her perfidious role to the League of Nations, the Kellogg-Briand Pact and the peaceful aims of the peoples of the world.

No powerful state under the auspices of the League had the initiative and leadership to lead the way in stopping this virtual outlaw among civilized peoples. The non-acceptance, even with reservations, of the League Covenant by the United States has been and will continue to be a definite, practical setback to the furtherance of peace in Europe and elsewhere. It played no doubt an important part in the councils considering what to do about Italy's avowed plans of conquest.

Ethiopia is a sovereign state just as Italy is. Ethiopia is a fellow member of the League of Nations. But she is an undeveloped country, industrially and in modern military equipment, so she proved an inviting victim to a believer in force and the glory of war.

No matter what the conditions were in Ethiopia, the airplane, machine-gun conquest of the country and its helpless subjects was an outrage and an unjustifiable act. Ethiopia has its own history, customs, traditions, and its own sovereign right of independence. Neither the methods employed nor the ends sought by Italy will stand any test of moral justification. It was sheer force and slaughter directed by a dictator. All Mussolini's rationalizations and so-called justifications are palpably weak and untenable, just smoke screens to cover the singular cruelty of his methods and end. What country will be struck next by Italy or any other treaty-breaking government?

The pressing necessity of an effective League of Nations, collective action for the maintenance of peace and outlawry of war are more evident than ever.

Certain practices among Ethiopians are certainly reprehensible to European and American eyes, but Europeans and Americans, with their assumed higher civilization, tolerate, if not ignore, practices and conditions just as reprehensible, if not more so, in view of their "higher" civilization.

A Voice From Alabama.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is a letter of protest against the unfair manipulation of WPA funds in Alabama. During the era of extravagance, at the expense of the working man and woman, privileges have been denied those who are in need of employment.

In face of the fact that 5,000 persons are now out of employment, through the action of the WPA in Alabama, no provisions have yet been met by the State Legislature or by Gov. Bibb Graves. A State which cannot pay its school teachers can yet afford to shoot hot air about being able to care for the 5,000 taken off its relief list. This is how the Government is now reducing the unemployment situation. Recently widows and those with physical handicaps were cut off. Are these to be left starving?

All around I find evidences of rascality and crookedness. If the President were to come to Alabama and see how his program has been made a farce of, he would be embarrassed. Even those who are true Deomocrats from birth are horrified at the "horse-thief" tactics used by the squandering of WPA money to private institutions. Among the most notorious injustices is the Federal concert orchestra in Birmingham. Ever since the first day it was organized the orchestra was met by opposition from the local symphony orchestra. However, the purpose of the Government musical body was to aid unemployed musicians; while the civic symphony was for a real musical organization in this city.

No one questions the value of the other body, but we of the musicians do say money which is designated for the unemployed musicians of this city shouldn't go to the civic symphony, to hear which we have to pay out of our own pocketbooks, while the Federal concert group plays free of charge at all the public playgrounds.

It is time to awake—time to fight. For if democracy is to survive the next election irregularities in the system of relief must stop. I am for Roosevelt and will vote for him but he is losing ground in Birmingham because of the incompetence of WPA officials.

The Soil Conservation Act.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fight waged by Secretary Ickes to gain control of the administration of the soil conservation act reveals the true colors of the act. It is a political measure to insure the farmers' vote for the "ins" and a grand opportunity to place thousands of political henchmen on Uncle Sam's pay roll.

To those who would decry this explanation of the purpose of the act, I would remind them that payments to farmers under the AAA was an obligation that had to be met, but manufacturers who had contracted with Uncle Sam on the basis of pre-NRA costs pleaded in vain to be relieved from the burdensome contracts when the NRA was enacted.

The Post Impressionist

"The Law Of The Plague."

Post Office, Saturday.

"WHAT," asks Donald L. Keller—presumably by way of suggesting a pleasant subject to the Column—"do you know about leprosy?"

To be sure, the Post-Impressionist did once see a case of leprosy.

He—the Post-Impressionist—was then a small boy in a country where this plague is extremely rare. He was alone in his parents' house, that late afternoon. The doorbell rang. He answered it.

On the porch stood a veiled figure. The fingers of its left hand were bandaged. From behind the veil, a hoarse voice whispered:

"Money, please!"

Then, while the boy's protesting voice died in his throat, while his eyes bulged with horror, the figure opened bandages—

Your columnist doesn't want to see another case . . .

Yet, although the Post-Impressionist knows nothing about leprosy, he doesn't feel lonely in his ignorance. His answer to Mr. Keller's question is essentially the answer of medical science.

There are about 3,000,000 lepers in the world. There are about 1,000 in the United States. "There are," according to the Leonard Wood Memorial Leprosy Foundation, "twice as many new lepers developing each year as are now in all the leper colonies."

Those three qualified statements pretty clearly typify the qualified character of all the statements which can be honestly made concerning leprosy. It is one of the oldest of diseases—but it remains a medical mystery.

Nobody knows whether leprosy is inheritable:

Perry Burgess, president of the Leonard Wood Memorial, tells, in the Scientific Monthly, of Chinese villages "established by lepers driven from their own communities" and the inhabitants forbidden to marry anybody from outside. Well, in some of these villages, after three generations, the scourge had entirely disappeared. Yet, says this investigator:

"Despite the fact that it has been for so long accepted that leprosy is not hereditary, several scientific workers are expressing a doubt that this is true . . . The question must be subjected to more thorough study."

Nobody knows whether leprosy is contagious:

A few years ago, at the leprosarium of Johore, in the Non-Federated Malay States, half-a-dozen nurses "ate with the patients and slept in the dormitories"—not one contracted the disease. Yet there are other communities which leprosy has swept like an epidemic.

In Puerto Rico nearly all the leprosy comes from only three towns, and in one of these nearly all the cases occur in two streets. Why? Nobody knows.

Leprosy seems to be disappearing from Europe, as if it had spent its force. In China it is as strong as ever.

In many malarial foci, there is no leprosy, while there is much among the neighboring highlands. In some provinces of Southern China, leprosy flourishes side by side with malaria.

Scarcely! The Esquimaux suffer from it in Iceland. The Hottentots suffer from it in Africa.

Is congestion of population a factor in the development and spread of this plague?

New York is a crowded city. As Mr. Burgess points out, the people of its Chinatown are as much crowded as the people of Singapore. But, whereas the leper-rate is high in Singapore, there are rarely more than 25 lepers in New York and "not a case on record of an individual contracting it in the city."

There's a common belief that, at least in these times, leprosy is a disease of poverty. Take one piece of evidence to the contrary:

Cuban physicians, reporting upon records covering three years and some 18,000 cases of skin diesease in Havana, find about a dozen lepers among poor patients—among patients of the "middle and upper classes," three times that many.

Deep in Cambodian jungles is the ruin of a palace built to isolate a leper king of Angkor, and carved on the facade is "a carabao tree, the native chaulmoogra, the nuts of which have offered a home-remedy for leprosy in Southern China for hundreds of years." Can leprosy be cured?

Says Mr. Burgess:

"Leprologists are very chary of the use of the word 'cure' . . . In the Philippines about 3,500 patients have been dismissed during the last ten years as bacteriologically negative. The disease has recurred in about one-half of these . . . The most that we can say is that it seems very probable that arrestment has been effected in early cases, but we are a long way from having a specific cure.

Correct English

By William Lyon Phelps

Alibi and Angle.

Here are two words that are constantly misused and its is a pity, because there are plenty of equally good words of precise meaning to take their places; and because both alibi and angle have a distinct meaning elsewhere, somewhere else, in another place. This is especially important because it is always used in law courts with this definite and specific meaning. If a man is accused of murder and if he can prove that he was somewhere else when the murder was committed, he cannot be convicted, because he has an alibi. Yet it is now used as a slang word, especially by the uneducated, meaning excuse. I have fought this loose and inaccurate use of the word for years, and now I am pleased to see that Mr. Herbert in his new book, "What a Word!" has this to say of Alibi.

Alibi.

"Alibi," Bobby, is a Latin word meaning 'elsewhere' and nothing more. As a noun it has long had a clear and useful significance in our courts of law, where, if you plead or prove an alibi, you say that you were elsewhere at the time of the crime. It is not, for example, an alibi to say that, though you did hit the other fellow, it was in self-defense. Mr. Weller in "The Pickwick Papers" used the word correctly, and I see no reason why we should not continue to do so. But suddenly—in the past few months, I think—we have begun to use alibi for an excuse, plea, defense, means of escape, or justification.

"A boxer called Max Baer, after losing a boxing match, whispered to the microphone, 'I have no alibi' (which could only mean that he did not intend to show that he was not present at the fight). A journalist tells us that when our cricketers returned from Australia 'they offered no alibis.' And if the journalist may do it, I suppose that the boxer may do it.

But nobody in my army may do it. There is no need for the change; it springs from ignorance or laziness; and to yield to 'popular usage' would here be cowardly. But does it matter, you ask me, Bobby. Yes. Here is a word having a precise, important meaning in criminal cases, especially in the most popular class of crime, which is murder . . .

Angle.

During the last 20 years the incorrect use of this word has been growing with extraordinary and terrifying rapidity. The late Prof. Albert S. Cook of Yale, a precise scholar in the English language, wrote me more than once begging me to attack the loose and inaccurate employment of this word. But it seems to gain in popularity every day. Constantly I see in otherwise respectable books and journals the expression "Looking at this from a different angle" or "from a new angle;" but if one will consider the real meaning of angle, one will perceive that to look "from an angle" is inaccurate.

Will The Democracies Lead?

France, Britain And U. S. Remain To Uphold Liberty Ideal.

The Post presents the sixth and last installment of a history and interpretation of present world events by an authority on current affairs. The articles are based largely on a more detailed study by the author, "The Dangerous Year," published by the Foreign Policy Association, New York City.

By Raymond Leslie Buell.

President of the Foreign Policy Association

AMONG the democracies of the world are three great powers: France, Britain and the United States. Despite the pacifism of the masses, the democracies are centers of economic nationalism and rapidly rising armaments. Can democracy long survive unless it finds a solution for the interrelated problems of economic security, social justice and international peace?

France is the only great country on the European continent which remains the home of the liberal tradition. Yet France today is troubled by grave unrest which has on occasion threatened to develop into civil war. The last few years have witnessed the growth of the Ligues—Fascist-minded groups of younger men, who believe in the overthrow of the parliamentary republic in favor of an authoritarian state. The past few years have witnessed growing disgust with cabinet instability, financial scandal, and the incapacity of politicians to consider the national interest.

To combat the Ligues, the forces of the Left united last year in a loosely organized Front Populaire. Socialists made their peace with Communists, and both groups entered into an understanding with the Radical Socialists and other Left parties in the Chamber. This group won an outstanding victory in the elections of May. 3. Nevertheless, among the Socialist groups there is no outstanding leader. It is feared that financial anarchy will follow the attempt of the Front Populaire to take power. In such a case the Ligues might finally succeed in turning France into a fascist state. This is the fear hanging over France.

While devaluation would at once ease the financial strain, it would not meet some of France's fundamental problems, created by the rise of vast industrial combinations which are a law unto themselves. France is groping for some new form of controlled economy, which would not be Marxian Socialism even if the Socialists took power; but so far it has produced few plans which meet present-day realities.

Britain Leading World To Economic Recovery.

BRITAIN is a democracy which is both a monarchy and an empire. Long known as the home of the most successful parliamentary system, it has become the scene of interesting social experiments and is leading the world to economic recovery. As the outburst of public sentiment in 1935 demonstrated, Britain has combined a sense of national greatness with a mission on behalf of world peace, which contrasts with the anti-foreign mystiques of the dictatorships.

Britain is one democracy which has rid itself of political corruption and built up an administrative state which can transact public business with honesty and efficiency. It has long understood the importance of ritual and tradition in the life of the people. While it is as intellectual and rationalistic in its approach to social problems as any republic, the British state provides an outlet for the psychological needs of the masses through the pageantry and symbolism of monarchy.

Three main reasons explain the success of British democracy. The first is a Calvinist tradition, which has created a high standard of public and private morality—the sense of fair play—and endowed the people with a strong humanitarian feeling, tempered though it may be by occasional lapses into hypocrisy. The second is a conservative class which has the intelligence and ability to initiate change and accept heavy taxation not only in order to meet the country's social requirements, but to preserve its own position. It is a striking fact that the great majority of Britain's Socialist measures have been initiated by Conservative governments. The third is an enlightened and powerful labor movement.

The organization of British life, however, is not without its defects. The condition of the depressed areas remains pitiful. In subsidizing the production of domestic sugar and wheat, the government has adopted the worst type of economic nationalism. Frequent shifts in foreign policy—such as Mr. Baldwin's wavering on the question of collective security—have perplexed and irritated the outside world. Probably the greatest inconsistency in British policy is that, while the government has favored collective political security, it still opposes collective solutions of the world's economic problems, such as currency stabilization and general tariff reduction.

Nevertheless, Italy's subjugation of Ethiopia constitutes a blow to British prestige. The first reaction in many British circles is in favor of "isolation" and today Britain is feverishly rearming. If Britain finally deserts the League, Germany undoubtedly will expand toward Central Europe and a new general war would become imminent. The future of Britain and of peace depends largely upon whether the most powerful and stable democracy in the world again attempts to bring a real League into existence.

United States Seen Struggling For Future.

THE THIRD great democracy of the world, the United States, has also been struggling to make the transition from rugged individualism to some form, as yet unshaped, of controlled economy, and from isolation to a new type of relationship with the outside world. But it is confronted with difficulties almost as serious as those of France.

Had this country been willing to pay the price for real isolation at the end of the World War, its own conscience might possibly have been satisfied and the world situation stabilized. Its rejection of the Versailles Treaty and the League and its repeated tariff increases would have represented a tenable policy had they been accompanied by cancellation of foreign debts and abandonment of the effort to build up foreign loans, trade and a merchant marine. But while declining to travel the road of international organization, the United States was unwilling to become isolationist. Taking advantage of the needs of a war-stricken world, it developed an enormous export trade and for a time became the world's greatest banker. Dominated by a new sense of power and prestige, it built up a strong navy and secured parity with Britain.

Under Coolidge and Hoover the United States followed a pseudo-internationalism marred by two principal defects; unwillingness to recognize that disarmament was dependent on political security, and refusal to admit that a country could profitably export goods without importing in return. For a time the world was lulled into a false sense of economic security by huge American foreign lending. But when the depression came in 1929, this lending abruptly stopped; and since the American capitalist system was less able than ever to absorb foreign goods, widespread defaults occurred in Europe.

The logical course at this juncture would have been to write off the foreign debt or reorganize the internal economic system so as to absorb foreign goods; the United States did neither. Congressmen merely denounced the wicked foreigner for failing to meet his ooligations. The key to the world economic situation was the American balance of payments.

Roosevelt Administration Tried To Correct Flaws.

IN TWO respects the Roosevelt Administration attempted to correct these defects in American foreign policy. With great single-mindedness of purpose Secretary of State Hull has pursued a policy of negotiating reciprocity treaties containing the unconditional most-favored-nation clause, in order to secure eventual tariff reduction without throwing the American economic system into further confusion. By the end of 1935 agreements had been concluded with nine countries which supply the United States with 34 per cent of its imports.

Secondly, the Roosevelt Administration for a time went further than its predecessors in recognizing the connection between political security and disarmament, and in associating the United States with international organization. In May, 1933, Ambassador Norman Davis said at Geneva that, if a disarmament convention were concluded, the United States would "consult" with other states in case of a dispute, and in the event of war would waive its neutral rights against a state which it agreed was the aggressor—a policy immediately nullified by the Senate, which refused to give the President discretionary power regarding arms embargoes. In January, 1935, the President asked the Senate to approve American adherence to the World Court. Although a majority voted for the court, the necessary two-thirds was lacking.

A further defeat for international co-operation came in the summer of 1935, when Congress made known that it would not give the President discretion to co-operate with League states in applying embargoes against an aggressor state. As a temporary compromise, the President accepted the neutrality resolution of August 31, 1935, which authorized him to apply an arms embargo against belligerents, provided it did not discriminate against the aggressor. Two days after Italian troops had invaded Ethiopia, President Roosevelt, acting ahead of the League, applied an arms embargo and warned Americans that they engaged in transactions with either belligerent at their own risk.

It soon developed, moreover, that the arms embargo was of little importance, since Italy did not rely on the United States for any implements of war except airplanes. What Mussolini wanted was gasoline to operate his tanks and planes in Africa. Although the August 31 neutrality act did not authorize any embargo on raw materials, President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull urged American exporters not to sell such products to Italy. The "moral pressure" policy, however, did not prevent the development of war trade with Italy; and for a time it was believed that the President would again make a fight for discretionary power when Congress re-opened.

As a result of the League's hesitation to vote an oil embargo, the bad impression created by the Hoare-Laval peace plan, and the approach of a Presidential election, the President did not undertake such a fight. Today the American policy toward war rmains as obscure as ever.

Meanwhile, the one coherent program of the United States is to build up a powerful army, navy and air force. Will the United States merely use this force to protect itself from invasion, will it adopt the time-honored methods of power-politics to uphold its rights and interests, or will it finally assist in a new effort at world organization?

Dictatorships Stand Against Democracies.

THUS the world today is confronted by the ominous threats of the great dictatorships of Italy, Germany and Japan. Possibly these three powers may form an alliance aimed at world domination. Opposed to these dictatorships are the three great democracies—confused, uncertain, pacifist. Unable to acquiesce in the expansion of the dictatorships, they have been unwilling seriously to challenge them. The outcome of the world-wide struggles between power-politics and the League of Nations idea, on the one hand; and the dictatorial against the liberal way of life, on the other, depends largely upon the ability of the great democracies to solve the problem of international organization. Until they do so, the question of war or peace, recovery or revolution, will hang in the balance.

World Future Depends On Their Ability To Readjust.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday reiterated his personal hope that Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, would reconsider his decision not to run for re-election.

The statement was made at a press conference after the President had conferred with Edward J. Flynn, Secretary of State of New York, and Bronx Democratic leader.

The President said that Lehman, a close friend and political ally, was needed by the State.

Previously Flynn had told reporters he expected the State convention in September to nominate Lehman despite his announcement he would not seek another term.

"Do you think he would accept?" he was asked.

"I think he will run," Flynn replied.

Seating Plans.

Meanwhile, Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic National Committee, settled the problem of arranging seats on the floor of the national convention at Philadelphia for more delegates and alternates than the hall will accommodate.

With the prospect of having to care for many hundreds more than the actual floor seating capacity of 2,584, he issued a statement saying "the States that have exceeded their quota must understand that if they persist in sending the larger number, it will be up to them to decide which among their delegation will be seated in the convention space."

Approximately 300 delegates and as many alternates, more than provided in the convention call already have bene selected in the 36 States which have chosen their representatives. A number of States have doubled their delegation, giving each member one-half a vote. Maryland outdid all others, selecting 48 delegates and as many alternates, to cast her 16 votes—one-third of a vote for each.

Lehman Is Firm.

Albany, N. Y., May 22 (AP).—President Roosevelt's hope that Gov. Lehman would decide to seek a third term, expressed by the President for the second time within 48 hours, brought from the Governor today only this comment:

"My statement speaks for itself."

The Governor referred to the formal announcement, Wednesday, in which he said he would not be a candidate for re-election.

Tonight the Governor will leave for New York City for the week-end, but the executive offices said he had no appointment to confer with Postmaster General James A. Farley, national and State Democratic chairman, who is already there for a conference with other party leaders.

Neither has the Governor an appointment to see President Roosevelt, who plans to be at Hyde Park over the week-end, a close associate said.

Young Is Proposed.

New York, May 22 (AP).—The Evening Post said today "a move to make Owen D. Young the Democratic nominee for Governor this fall was quickly under way."

It is backed, The Post said, "by some strategists in Tammany and in Wall street." Young is chairman of the General Electric Co.

The movement, the paper said, would come to an end, should Gov. Herbert H. Lehman decide to seek re-election.

Knox Choice Urged.

Peoria, May 22 (AP).—Nomination by the Cleveland convention of Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, for the Presidency, was urged today by the Republican State convention.

After four hours of oratory, devoted mostly to attacks on State and national Democratic administrations, the convention adopted a resolution instructing the eight delegates-at-large to vote for the publisher of the Chicago Daily News.

Knox was termed "a militant leader" and "the ideal candidate" in the resolution offered by C. Wayland Brooks, the party's nominee for Governor. There was some booing and shouts of "no" when the vote was taken, but the convention outwardly was harmonious throughout.

Members of the resolutions committee said no effort was made by supporters of Senator William E. Borah to obtain an indorsement of him. Borah was defeated in the primary contest for the State's Presidential preference vote by Knox.

The resolution did not attempt to instruct the four district delegates efected at the primary. Borah carried 10 districts and Knox 15, 5 of them downstate, in the preference balloting.

Brooks drew applause when he mentioned the name of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden in connection with the farm problem. He was cheered again when he withdrew as a delegate at large to make room for a representative of Negro Republicans. Former Representative Oscar DePriest was chosen for Brooks' post.

Other delegates at large elected included former Vice President Charles G. Dawes, A. D. Lasker, former United States Senator Otis F. Glenn, and Edward A. Hayes, Knox campaign manager.

Nebraska Vote Tabulated.

Lincoln, Nebr., May 22 (AP).—The official tabulation today of Nebraska's April 14 primary election returns showed that 157,903 Democrats and 139,388 Republicans voted.

Senator William E. Borah, the only candidate whose name was printed on the Republican Presidential preference ballot, received 70,240 votes. "Write-ins" for Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, totaled 23,117 and "write-ins" for all other Republicans, 973.

The result of the preference vote is not binding on Nebraska's 15 uninstructed delegates to the party's national convention.

President Roosevelt was unopposed on the Democratic ballot and was indorsed for renomination by 139,743 of the 157,903 Democrats who went to the polls.

Stoney Enters Field

Charleston, S. C., May 22 (AP).—Attacking the Roosevelt Administration, Thomas P. Stoney, former Mayor of Charleston, formally announced today he would oppose U. S. Senator James F. Byrnes in the Democratic primary of August 25.

"A challenge has been flung," Stoney said in a statement, "to the system of government under which the United States has become the most prosperous and powerful country in the world. Our progress was achieved without the sacrifice of that liberty and freedom on which the Nation was founded, without the despotism that is the bane of many other countries, without the centralization of government that would deprive the States of the powers reserved to them under our Constitution. All this is now challenged and threatened.

Lynch Bill Caucus Move Is Blocked

By the Associated Press.

Plans to stimulate action on anti-lynching legislation by the majority caucus method failed in the House last night when the proponents failed to muster a quorum.

Called together on a petition signed by 27 Democrats led by Representative Ford, of California, the members found that even discussion was blocked when Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, raised a point of no quorum.

Slightly more than 60 members were reported to have been on hand, out of the 18 needed for a quorum.

Thirty-one bills have been introduced in the House, most of them along lines of a measure approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee early last year, but blocked when attempts were made to get floor consideration. The general objective is to make States responsible for acts of officials of Commonwealths or their subdivisions who fail to protect a person against mob violence.

Student, Hunted; Missing Five Days

Seventeen-year-old George Washington University student, John Francis Earnshaw, who disappered from his home, 1343 Maple View place northwest, was being sought by police yesterday.

Mrs. Frank L. Earnshaw, his mother, told police she discovered John was missing Sunday when she and her husband returned home from a week-end trip with another son, William.

Mrs. Earnshaw at first thought John left home because of his studies, but learned later that his school record was excellent.

Earnshaw graduated from Eastern High School in February and entered George Washington University the same month. He is described as of slight build, blond and blue-eyed. His mother said he took no clothes from home and had only $2.00 in cash when he left home.

Railroads Lost Money in 1935, Court Is Told

Retirement Act Opponents Attack Excise Tax as Bankruptcy Threat.

By the Associated Press.

Climaxing a succession of railroad executive witnesses in District Supreme Court, Edward Buckland testified yesterday that the Nation's railroads, as a whole, failed by $208,000 to make a profit in 1935.

Buckland, chairman of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and president of the Railroad Credit Corporation, was called to testify for 141 class 1 railroads which are attacking the railroad retirement act as unconstitutional.

Evidence that aging firemen were allowed to "double up" on a single job, with single pay, in hot weather was introduced by the Government in an attempt to prove continued service of "superannuated" workers reduced the efficiency of the roads.

"As far as the records of the railroads reveal," Buckland testified, "the statements made by executives here today are typical."

Buckland said the railroads face "a very serious situation with regard to maturing obligations." In the next two years, about $1,175,000,000 of maturities will come due, he said.

The railroads' ability to obtain RFC loans will be seriously affected by the tax costs, he testified, citing the case of his own road. The New Haven was refused a loan, he said, because "among other things, we failed to include in our statement the amounts due under the railroad retirement act." Failing to get the loan, the line went into bankruptcy.

"You don't mean to imply," demanded Charles M. Hay, Government attorney, "that any of these roads went into receivership because of alarm over this tax?"

"I didn't say that," Buckland replied. "What I do say is that in my opinion, if you add this tax to other burdens, some railroads will go into receivership which would not otherwise go in."

"Under the trusteeship, you held onto your own pension system, didn't you?" Hay asked.

"Oh, yes."

"And these other roads?"

"I suppose so."

"In other words, the pension system is looked upon in the railroad business as an asset to the road."

Industry Holds Prosperity Key, Sloan Asserts

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles May 22.—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors Corporation, in an address tonight declared the Nation is "at the cross roads" and must choose between free competition in industry or regulation and ultimate regimentation.

Sloan's speech was for delivery at a dinner of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce in connection with the opening of a new General Motors plant.

Industry's traditional policy of competition and unrestricted production, he said, held the promise of correction of the country's economic ills.

"Regulation of industry," said Sloan, "is only possible by Government acting in the interest of the worker, the consumer and ownership. But Government must act through bureaucracy.

"Bureaucracy is costly not only from the standpoint of the taxpayer—we certainly realize that—but in dissipating human energy. It takes not only a great, but an ever-increasing number of workers from productive industry; hence instead of adding to the creation of wealth there is a continually increasing burden placed upon those who are producing wealth."

Has Solution.

The country, he asserted, has all of the essential elements for solving the problem of unemployment and for providing a more even distribution of purchasing power.

"Some industrialists," he continued, "believe that the proper approach is to move continually toward a lower cost of goods and services. As a matter of fact, that has been largely the policy of American industry down through its entire history.

"This particular group believes that more employment and more wealth can be created by always lowering prices. By this is meant always giving more for the same money or the same for less money. They believe that competition should be the dominating urge of accomplishment, the survival of the fittest in the interest of the greatest number.

"On the other hand we find a diametrically opposed viewpoint expressed in an interesting discussion recently by the Chief Executive of our Nation, who in an address made in New York, in discussing his economic and political beliefs, made the following statement:

"Reduction of costs of manufacture does not mean more purchasing power and more goods consumed. It means just the opposite."

Hopes for Discussion.

"I sincerely hope that we may have a very broad discussion of that rather astounding pronouncement before we reverse our industrial technique. I cannot believe that this means what it really says. It must be based on the belief that a reduction in the cost of manufacture means a reduction in the wage scale.

"That is not necessarily so, in fact it should not be so. It can be demonstrated beyond any reasonable doubt that those industries which have been most successful in reducing the costs of goods and services and expanding their markets have, at the same time, paid the highest wages and have continually raised that wage through evolution."

House Concurs In Mississippi Flood Measure

Vote 162 to 156; Bill Altered to Make States Pay for Land Damages.

After a stormy debate yesterday, the House passed by 162 to 156 the Senate-approved Overton bill for flood control in the lower Mississippi Valley, but it forced on the States land damage costs for project construction and refused to authorize an appropriation for the 26 dams on the Arkansas River, amended into the bill last Thursday.

The final vote was so close that its sponsors feared at first the bill had been defeated. Five Democrats, however, went to the Speaker's well and changed their votes from "no" to "aye," and the measure was saved.

Representative Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio, offered the amendment, similar to the provision in the omnibus flood control bill passed by the Senate Thursday, requiring local interests to pay land damage and operating costs. Jenkins declared that since all other sections of the country must pay the incidental costs for local flood projects, the Southern States benefiting from the Overton bill should not be relieved from similar contributions.

The amendment was violently opposed by Chairman Wilson (Democrat), Louisiana, of the House Flood Control Committee, and by Representative Whittington (Democrat), of Mississippi. In an impassioned plea, Whittington declared the people on the lower Mississippi would be "crucified" if the amendment prevailed, "since they would be forced to pay for their own destruction."

Nonetheless, the amendment was adopted, and the House refused to reverse itself later when Chairman Wilson asked and was given a separate voice vote on the proposal. Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, author of the bill, was in the chamber and he pleaded with Wilson to seek a roll-call vote on the amendment, but Wilson did not press for it.

The 26 new dams along the Arkansas River, projected in the bill Thursday when the Miller-Terry amendment was adopted, were left dangling when the House refused to authorize an appropriation of $126,000,000 for them. An announcement by Maj. Gen. E. M. Markham that he could not recommend Presidential approval of the bill if the reservoirs were included doomed them.

The bill now goes to conference to iron out Senate and House differences. An effort will be made by its sponsors to eliminate the Jenkins amendment on land damage costs.

Flood control for the lower Mississippi Valley was separated from the omnibus bill because of the flood program already in effect in that area. In 1928, Congress approved the Jadwin plan, estimated to cost nearly a billion dollars, for a series of floodways, dykes and levees in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana to protect the alluvial valley. Projects carried in the Overton bill are designed to bring the Jadwin plan to about two-thirds of completion.

Pupils Hold Circus At Central Today

With pet animals, from dogs to ponies, with plenty of clown antics, with band music and with plenty of balloons, they will emulate "the greatest show on earth."

The children's parade, in which all the performers will march, will start at 2:30 o'clock. Before the procession, however, the crowd will be entertained by tribal ceremonies, staged by Sioux Indians, whose encampment is on Mount Vernon boulevard.

One of the principal circus acts will be a "Pioneer Days" pageant with Indians, cowboys and plainsmen playing the roles.

In case of rain the program will be moved to the stage of Central auditorium.

Tax Bill Held $100,000,000 Shy

By demonstrated performance, this group contended, a 25 per cent rate in the higher brackets in the individual income tax will bring more money than a higher rate, and will divert investments from tax-exempt to productive securities.

The league further asked a manufacturers' sales tax of 3 per cent, to produce $2,000,000,000.

"When the Government seizes the Nation's income both purchasing and investment powers are destroyed and labor is transferred from jobs to doles, and stagnation and want stalk through the land unchallenged," read a statement issued by the organization.

"The present tax measure paralyzes the purchasing power and arrests investments in productive enterprises and the bill now under consideration in Congress increases the legislative barriers to recovery and creates an artificial handicap that capital cannot surmount.

"To continue to pyramid the levies upon income—corporate or private—to widen confiscation and discrimination can only result in prolonging and intensifying depression and increasing unemployment."

Chairman Harrison conferred with the President at the White House, but whether the President approved or disapproved of the Finance Committee's compromise action was not disclosed. It appeared certain the revised bill, once the dispute over estimates is cleared, will be reported to the Senate with some changes Monday. It remained uncertain, however, whether the tax bill, or the uncompleted relief measure, will be considered first, although Harrison said the new tax draft will be called up immediately after disposition of the relief bill, Wednesday or Thursday.

Possibility that the committee in its search for revenue may reconsider its action sidetracking a 25 per cent increase in individual income taxes, remained in the picture. Harrison indicated yesterday the question is still a moot one. He smiled when a reporter said such a tax might not be good election medicine.

Baptists Urge Co-Operatives Of Consumers

Convention at St. Louis Favors Shorter Hours, 'Leving Wage.'

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 22.—A study of consumers' co-operatives as "a possible Christian solution of some of the problems involved in production and distribution" was recommended today to the Northern Baptists convention by its resolutions committee.

Another resolution urged industrialists to "follow Christian principles in providing shorter hours, a living wage and favorable conditions that will increase the opportunity for employment" and declared for "an acceptance of the principle of arbitration and other non-violent methods of settling industrial disputes."

Elimination of child labor was urged and "a reasonable old-age pension" demanded.

The "historic" opposition of the Northern Baptist Church to "absolutism in Government, whether Communist or Fascist," was restated and teachers' oaths of allegiance were denounced.

The convention will act on the resolutions tomorrow.

"Is it too much to hope that in these anniversary days, North and South, United States and United States of America, will give us a great longing for unity that we may take our rightful place not only in making America Christian but also in hastening the acclaim of the divine redeemer's universal kingship?"

How a Baby Grows

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

Creeping Part One

THE BABY LEARNS TO CREEP. He goes on fours, before twos. Uses hands and knees, before he travels by foot. At the end of the first year, he becomes a biped. In the four pictures below, the gr owing infant is shown at 20 weeks of age. He is literally anchored to one spot. He draws up his knees, but is unsuccessful in making headway in any direction. *TOMORROW: A page of pictures in the Rotogravure Section of The Sunday Post. The FOURTH MONTH OF THE BABY'S LIFE. New Envoy Of Bulgaria Likes D. C.

Mr. Dimitri Naoumoff Believes Washingtonians Are Hospitable.

Minister Lives Alone in Legation; Plans Tour of United States.

By Dudley Harmon.

Mr. Dimitri Naoumoff, newly arrived Minister of Bulgaria, likes music, tennis, hiking in the mountains, Bulgarian cigarettes, and newspaper people. He also likes Washington, partly because he thinks the people here are so hospitable, but with true diplomatic tact refuses to compare it favorably or unfavorably with other cities in which he has lived during his 18 years in the foreign service.

Mr. Naoumoff's interest in the press is owing mainly to the fact that at one time he was a newspaper editor and writer himself. Before he entered the Diplomatic Corps, he was co-editor of a French newspaper in Sofia. Immediately preceding his Washington assignment he was press director of the foreign office in the Bulgarian capital. He has also contributed many articles on politics and economics to the newspapers, and for relaxation likes to pick up a volume dealing with social or monetary problems.

The minister followed the procedure of most European diplomats and prepared for his career in the foreign service by studying law. Then he was for four years first secretary of the Bulgarian Legation in London, and thus speaks perfect English, with a slight Oxford accent. Mr. Naoumoff also served for four years as first secretary to King Boris of Bulgaria, whose hobbies are botany and mechanics, and who frequently drives the locomotive himself on railway trips between Sofia and other cities.

Mr. Naoumoff looks forward to the concert and theater season next winter. Although he says he plays no instrument himself, he is fond of music. In Sofia he went often to the municipal opera and theater, which give performances on alternate nights, and already has been to the theater several times since his arrival in Washington.

A bachelor, Mr. Naoumoff lives alone in the big legation on Woodland drive. The luxurious drawing room of the legation opens on a large and well-kept garden, cut off from the noise of the street below by a hedge.

Through his reading Mr. Naoumoff already knows much of America, although this is his first trip to the United States. During the summer he plans to get a first-hand knowledge of the American scene in a six weeks' tour through the country.

"Happy birthday to you" was the theme of many messages Thursday to Mrs. John Herrick, formerly Genevieve Forbes, the noted newspaperwoman, who has been ill for weeks following the motor accident last fall in New Mexico, when she was injured and Mrs. Harold Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, was killed.

Stay Young, Act Adult, Tip on Happy Parenthood

Studies of Middle-Aged Result in Sage Warning to Women Not to 'Settle Down' and Worry Over 'Lost Youth.'

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IT HAS BEEN said modern woman's chief interest is her child; her chief problem, her husband her chief desire—to develop herself apart from either husband or child.

Yet if the last premise is true, the average middle-aged mother falls far short of her ambition, in the opinion of Dr. E. C. Lindeman, professor of philosophy of the New York School of Social Work, now in charge of leisure time activities of the WPA.

Hope R. Miller.

A widely-known author and lecturer, Dr. Lindeman has devoted much time to problems facing the modern adult, and has discovered the average mother and father are regarded as "back-numbers" by their children because the parents have failed "to grow with the years."

He has observed that the average woman in her 30's and 40's has lost balance in her life; has forgotten how to spend her leisure time profitably; has devoted so much attention to her child or her husband she has failed to develop her mind or interests in directions that would make her a good companion to other members of her family. Her spare time goes to studying styles or reading about "How to Lose Weight." She worries about growing old, watches the mirror for each new wrinkle or gray hair, considers having her face lifted or her hair dyed, and wishes she could deduct a decade or two from her age.

"In short, no woman (or man, for that matter) wants to grow old because there is apparently little compensation for lost youth," said Dr. Lindeman. "But if every woman after 30 continued the same interests and activities she did before, and was as concerned with developing her mind and her skill as in keeping slender and smartly dressed, there would be no such thing as 'lost youth.'"

The average wife in modern society lets the years take their toll too early, Dr. Lindeman believes. "As soon as she marries she and her husband stop dancing, stop playing tennis, swimming, riding horseback or participating in any of the activities they enjoyed together before or during courtship. She devotes most of her time to her home and her children, and the rest to shopping and playing bridge.

"No wonder she wistfully wishes she could be young again to share in her daughter's activities or to outwit the 'other woman.' No wonder she feels this is, after all a youth's world."

Adults Need Spot Light.

Too much fanfare and attention are showered on youth, Dr. Lindeman believes. "Adults are the ones who need the spotlight now. They must be made to realize that it is not the sole purpose of parents to live for their children. This living for children is really a boomerang. It is the worst thing for both offspring and parent. It gives youth an inflated idea of its importance, and makes every person dread to grow old," he said.

"It ought to be the other way around," Dr. Lindeman went on. "If adults developed themselves as they should, if they continued all activities they enjoyed in youth and added others, boys and girls would long for the time to come when they could be 'just like mother and dad.'"

He believes the "most horrible phrase used to apply to younger married persons is that they have "settled down." "Yet, in truth, that is exactly what most of them do," he said. "They just sit. And, like the music, their minds go 'round and round'—but each circle is smaller than the one before."

Then what's to be done about it? What hope is there for the woman who has made the mistake of "settling down?" What about the woman who at middle age discovers her children—and perhaps her husband—consider her a hopeless back number?

"Stay Young, Remain Adult."

Answering these, Dr. Lindeman pointed out "a woman's great problem, of course, is to stay young in attitude and still remain adult in bearing; in other words, to remain youthful without being childish."

He feels no person is more pitiable than a woman who goes girly-girly at middle age; who bends herself out of shape to keep young and ends up by being kittenish. And if any woman suddenly emerges from her cocoon of inactivity and resumes the sports and interests of her younger days, she may cause unfavorable comment—"unless she enlists her friends in the same pursuits," he said.

"One thing she can do is to organize a dancing class or a drama group and persuade her friends to join," he suggested. "She can take up tennis or swimming or horseback-riding with women of her own age. She can set aside some of her time to read books that are being discussed, to write, to play the piano or do whatever she did when she was young. This will do more to restore her 'lost youth' than any rejuvenation treatment on record."

Elaborating on the value of dancing, Dr. Lindeman said: "This is one activity all persons should enjoy as long as they live. It keeps the body alive, flexible and pliable. It is particularly valuable to a woman because it develops her grace, helps to preserve her health and keeps her lithe and slender. A woman of 40 or 50 can dance to as good advantage as her daughter. A grandmother, as well as her grandchild. No one, in fact, is ever too old to dance."

He stressed, however, that it would be much better if every wife and mother continued this and other so-called "youth pursuits" on through the years, and never had to take them after a period of "settling down."

How to Stay Young.

1. Don't let yourself be a "back number."
2. Don't give your children all the spotlight; keep some for yourself.
3. Don't lament your "lost youth;" be young yourself.
4. Pursue the same sports and develop the same skills you enjoyed in your youth. Dance, play tennis, ride horseback; join a group interested in theatricals; sing, paint or write.
5. Take on new interests. Keep up with the world. Don't let it put you in the chimney corner.

Children Must Learn Safety In Swimming

Should Be Taught to Take Care of Himself in Emergency.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

IT IS NOT enough for a child to know merely how to keep himself up in the water. Keeping his head in emergencies is just as important as keeping it above water. As soon as he can swim at all, he must be taught how to take care of himself and to think of others in any kind of a situation.

Swimming with clothes on is a very different matter from swimming in a bathing suit; a long swim requires a different technique than a short one: a sudden immersion from a capsized boat is not at all the same thing as diving or jumping into the water at one's pleasure.

Child Should Be Tested.

A child should be tested in each of these situations before he is pronounced absolutely free to do as he likes and go where he wants about the water. It might be a good idea for his father, or some able swimmer, to take him, fully dressed, out in a boat, and then, without warning, to turn the boat over. An experiment in long distance swimming with a boat at hand to pick the child up if he grows tired is also a good idea.

He must be taught not to grow panicky, never to seize another swimmer and try to climb over him to safety. How to be rescued is just as important a lesson as how to rescue.

Nonswimmers Dangerous.

One of the tragic features of many drownings is that the boy who could swim was pulled under and drowned in his efforts to rescue the other boy who could not. Children must learn that for a swimmer to "take a chance" with a non-swimmer is extermely dangerous. Unless the whole group can swim there is real safety for no one.

The boy who is excluded from water sports by his companions will soon get busy and learn to swim.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

—Posed by Joan Bennett.

For Touching Up Complexion After Makeup Has Been Applied, Terra Cotta Dry Rouge Is Recommended.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

CREAM ROUGE has always been my choice for first makeup, but it is pretty difficult to get just enough rouge on especially if you make up, as most women do, by electric light. It is really too bad that dressing tables can't be put near to a widnow. It would save so much embarrassment. Usually it is a question of getting too much rouge on and looking a little bit fast when you get out into the daylight. Ultraconservative women have trouble because they put too little on and when they get outdoors do not look as healthy and rosy as they intended they should.

There is a new dry rouge, terra cotta in color, that is so soft that you can correct the mistake of looking too pale by a slight application of it. The most experienced of makeup artists frequently go wrong on face rouge. It is practically necessary to have a dry rouge compact in your purse at all times in order to look your best—day and evening.

One of the finest manufacturers has put out this new shade, which is very, very soft and seems not to clash with any complexion. So many dry rouges are too vivid in color to use without plenty of time and perfect daylight by which to apply them. Not so, this new one. As a matter of fact, I have found very few rouges as soft in shade as this and so near perfection for almost any complexion.

Congeniality Voted as Key To Marriage

A GOOD DISPOSITION and pleasing personality are more important in a marriage partner than intelligence or beauty, according to a poll of 642 college students taken by Prof. Ray E. Baber, of New York University. He describes the results of this census in the Journal of Social Hygiene.

The students considered good health as secondary to a good disposition in a marriage partner, while intelligence and education ranked in third place. The desire that the life-long mate be of the same religion showed unexpected strength and polled twice as many votes as did beauty and good looks. In fact, less than 1 per cent of the young women chose good looks as the most important characteristic of the man they would like to marry.

Wealth, difference in age and family connections appeared to be of relatively minor importance to these college students in the serious business of choosing a spouse.

Parents, however, have slightly different ideas concerning their prospective sons-in-law and daughters-in-law. When Prof. Baber made a similar poll of these students' parents it was found that by a very wide margin they considered health as the leading requisite. Disposition and personality, ranked first by the student, ranged between third and sixth choice among the parents. "Intelligence and education," rated high by the students, dropped to a very low place, and "moral standards" were elevated by the parents to third place.

Both parents and students agreed that "wealth," "age" and "family" are not essential to a happy married life.

Post Fashion Editor Has Page for Children

Fashions for children have now become as interesting and important as for adults. Gone are the days when Mother sallied forth and bought for Junior or Betty almost any plain practical garment that caught her eye. Children take as much pride in their clothes as do grownups and find great pleasure in the selection of them.

What kind of clothes do children like? Should they select their own garments? What will they be wearing this summer? These questions are discussed in a story by Ethel Ehlen, The Post Fashion Editor, in The Sunday Post. Photographs of new styles for children shown in Washington shops accompany the article.

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

When to Remove Tonsils.

Schools will soon be out and the vacation period at hand. Perhaps the school nurse or the school or family physician has recommended the removal of Johnny's tonsils or adenoids. The question then arises, "Shall the operation be performed seeking improvement in health?"

Taking out tonsils has become so common that many believe that these collections of lymphoid tissue should be removed willy-nilly. One may examine 50 youngsters and find clear-cut indications for the operation in each. On the other hand there have been many instances in which the procedure was unnecessary.

The age of the child is an important factor as lymph tissue (of which the tonsils are composed) grows rapidly during the first five or six years of life. If we see greatly enlarged tonsils after the age of 6 or 7, infection is present more often than not. Caution should be exercised, however, in the extirpation of merely large tonsils (noninfected) under the age of 5 unless definite obstruction to swallowing, breathing, or drainage from the middle ear is evident.

Remove When Uninfected.

Acute tonsilitis (inflammation of the tonsils) is generally accompanied by considerable swelling. Within a day or so enlargement of the lymph glands at the angle of the jaw will appear. This means that the infection has spread along the lymph channels. Even after the temperature returns to normal the child is fagged out and much below par for a week or more. In many children this symptom or sore throat (tonsilitis) comes on every month or so with the same results. It may begin as early as the first year of life and the cause is commonly a vicious strain of the streptococcus. Any boy or girl who has experienced these recurring attacks should be relieved of the tonsils during an interval when infection is not active.

The lymph node (gland) at the angle of the jaw is an excellent guide. If this area is considerably enlarged and particularly if the gland varies in size—becomes larger and then shrinks—this means that absorption from the throat is taking place, slowly at times, more rapidly at others. Many experts believe that this gland serves as a better signpost to throat infection than examination of the tonsils themselves.

One Drastic Exception.

There is one cardinal rule that should always be observed, namely, that in the presence of infection within the nose or throat, or should there be a temperature from any cause, the operation should be delayed until the patient returns to health. Neither should surgical attack be contemplated in an acute general disease such as rheumatic fever, arthritis, endocarditis, or chorea (St. Vitis dance). There is just one exception, and that is, if the general disease is progressing rapidly the operation is the lesser of two evils.

The family physician is often the best judge as to what should be done. He knows more about the constitution of the child and is usually thoroughly competent to evaluate all the symptoms. We must recall, however, that freeing the throat of all infected tissue has proved to be one of our most valuable therapeutic procedures. On the other hand, infection must be proved before the guilt of these structures will warrant execution. The operation itself is a formidable one and requires expert training.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

What Can Be Done With Husband Who Is Unwarrantedly Jealous and Who Meddles in Kitchen Affairs?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married two years to a man 12 years my senior. I am 21 and we have two darling children. For their sake I am trying to keep our home together. My husband seemed to be a peach before we were married. I thought he would never change. But soon after we were married he showed himself to be unreasonably jealous of me. On his return home he would invariably ask if anyone had called while he was away. When there were callers I would tell him. If none had called I would report that, too. When I replied in the negative he would say, "Now, you know someone has been here." It seems in his jealousy he was constantly under the impression I had men callers in his absence.

• • • •

Why he would think so I do not know. I never went with any other man from the time our friendship started five years ago, and that may have been a mistake. Plenty of men wished to go with me, but I cared so much for him that I never looked at anyone else. I am well liked and attractive, and this may explain his jealousy somewhat. Furthermore, he is nagging as well as jealous, and is always checking over kitchen supplies, etc., to see how much has been used of this and that. I do not permit myself to lose my temper, but he gets me so upset I can't think straight at times, even though I do love him very much.

• • • •

We live in a house which belongs to me and I spend my own money, but he often gets angry with me when he comes home at night because I have not finished my housework—as if that is any of his business! At such times I say nothing, but just slip off to myself and hide to keep from being nagged to death. Miss Haworth, I hope you can help me solve my problem. It is for the children's sake that I have borne with things this long. I love my husband, but if he keeps on I think I shall lose my mind. I am far from happy. Yours sincerely,

UNHAPPY WIFE.

No General Rule.

DEAR UNHAPPY WIFE: There is no general rule for dealing with a husband who is jealous and niggardly, prying and suspicious. Such unfortunate character traits are as ineradicable a part of some individuals' make up as the shape of their ears and the color of their eyes and often have to be accepted with the same finality. The best advice I can give for dealing with your husband's jealousy is to be circumspect and honorable in your social relationships; warmly affectionate toward your husband, but firmly courageous in rebuking him for his outrageous and unwarranted suspicions regarding your loyalty to him. Don't let him place you on the defensive with his accusations—by which I mean to say, don't meekly explain your every action and try to prove your innocence of his charges. Show a fighting spirit if necessary, and display a righteous indignation at the idiocy of his attitude.

• • • •

You might tell him that such conduct as his breaks up homes and drives husbands and wives apart; that if he does not trust you, it is his privilege to leave you, but that he can look the world over and never find a woman who would be a more faithful wife than yourself. Be firm and postive, not pleading and apologetic, in your attitude.

• • • •

In the interests of domestic harmony, it might be well to make every effort to have your housework done, except for the serving of dinner, by the time he gets home. As for his snooping about the kitchen and pantry, checking on household supplies, I think I would tell him definitely to cut it out. Ask him how he would like you to go to his place of work and check on the way he is handling his business affairs. I believe a man with his disposition can best be handled by a display of determined character on the part of his wife. If he finds he can walk over you, he will no doubt continue to do so. If he finds he can't, and he still loves you, he will simply have to learn to curb himself to some extent, if he expects to keep his marriage a going concern. M. H.

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

Brenda Fayre, 22, is the sole support of her invalid sister, Lally. And Lally is secretly in love with Val Sargent, boyish but brilliant young writer who has the apartment above theirs, where he is writing a novel. And, because she is in love—though she thinks no one knows her secret—Lally has convinced herself that she will be able to walk again. Brenda has guessed her sister's secret and cannot bring herself to discourage Lally.

Brenda had kept secret from her sister her own misfortune in losing her job and now keeps secret the sort of work she has found to do—at $50 a week and 1 per cent commission on sales. For Brenda is a "siren" for Walter Jason, promoter and gold mining stock salesman. Wearing luxurious clothes, furnished by Jason, she entertains the men who are prospective buyers of Jason's stock. Brenda is convinced that Jason's business is crooked, but regards her duty to Lally as her first consideration.

One day Brenda is disturbed to learn that Val has called for her at the office. She wonders why.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN.

THAT night when Brenda and Val were doing the dishes she asked him why he had come to the office.

"To take you to lunch, but you weren't there," he replied, polishing a plate with great care, for he was drying and she was washing.

"Oh—" she had thought he must have come to ask something about Lally. "Oh," she repeated.

"Is there any law which says I can't run up to your office and ask you to have lunch with me.?"

"No, but—"

"But, what?"

"Nothing," hastily as she put the last fork on the sink.

"Would you be there tomorrow if I came along—say at 12?"

"I'm never there at noon." Brenda was uncomfortable. She wished she had never asked Val why he had visited the office today. "I'm all through," she said, "I'll finish up the drying, you run along out with Lally."

She felt better when she had the kitchen to herself, not because there was more room there with him gone but because she didn't want to talk any more about having lunch. Today was the first time he had ever been in her office, today was the first time he had ever suggested lunch, and the suggestion embarrassed her.

She made a long job of the rest of the work in the kitchen, slowly dried the rest of the dishes, slowly polished up the sink and slowly swept the floor. Through the closed door the voices of Val and Lally came to her, their laughter and their little silences. Now and then the chirp of Peter. While she was working slowly, finding more and more tasks to do to keep her out of the living room, she told herself that Val's luncheon invitation meant nothing. Kindness. Purely accidental that he had happened to run into the Tower Building.

By morning, she decided the incident of the kitchen was too trivial to worry about, and because she was very busy with Walter almost all day, she had forgotten it when she got off the street car at Twelfth avenue on the way home.

Forgotten.

So when she saw Val standing at the curb, she waved at him gayly from the steps of the car and joined him.

"Fancy meeting you here!" she laughed.

"Fancy that. Can't I go up and buy a package of cigarettes without seeing you on every corner?"

She went in to do her shopping at the grocery store and Val went with her. When she was through, he took her bundles from her and carried them for her. They both waved to Lally when they saw her on the balcony and Lally waved back frantically. When Val left Brenda in the elevator at the fifth floor, the same uncomfortable feeling she had had the night before came over her again.

"Where's Val?" Lally said sitting by the open door of 519.

"He went on upstairs."

"Did you come all the way from town with him?"

"No, I ran into him when I was getting off the street car. He was buying some cigarettes."

"Here I expected to see only you, and there was Val, too," Lally laughed a little. "Is he coming down tonight?"

"You know Mrs. Johnson is coming."

"You should have made him come in to dinner. There's plenty," reproachfully. "Did he have anything to say?"

"Not much."

"Was he in the grocery store when you went in?"

"No, he was just going to cross the street. When he saw me, he waited for me." A hot flush crept up Brenda's cheeks as she said this. All of it so important to Lally, and so unimportant to her. She had lied a bit, too, because Val wasn't about to cross the street as the car came.

She wasn't entirely easy in her mind, though, all during dinner and the thought kept recurring that it was probable that Val might have come up to meet her, although if he had it would be the first time.

Mrs. Johnson came at 8, wheeled Lally into the bedroom, and started her massage.

At 8:30 a knock came on the door and when Brenda opened it she found Val in the hall.

Fibbing.

"I know. Don't you think I know the nights she comes? But I thought—well, I figured it was a nice night and I needed a walk, Brenda, and I wondered if you would come along with me."

"Really . . . I can't. I'm expecting a phone call from the office."

His eyebrows went up and a smile came onto his lips. "Are you saying that because you really expect a call, or you don't want to go walking with me?"

"I am expecting a call," she fibbed. "It's about some work tomorrow."

"The lady doesnt lie very convincingly. So long, then, I'm on my way."

She closed the door softly after him, went back to her chair and picked up the magazine she had been reading. It was impossible, though, to read now. The print blurred before her eyes.

It was the first time Val had asked her to go walking with him—without Lally, and he had chosen a night when he knew Lally was occupied with Mrs. Johnson.

In the bedroom she heard Mrs. Johnson talking very softly to Lally, and Lally's quiet voice in response.

Mrs. Johnson stopped talking. The bedroom was quiet for a long time, and then the masseuse began to sing. The footsteps upstairs shuffled again into the living room, and Brenda wished the Corwin had been built more substantially, for she could hear Val so plainly, more plainly tonight than ever before. Perhaps, though, it was because she was so conscious of him.

Other Brenda.

The singing became a soft hum and ceased after a while. Mrs. Johnson finally came out in her white uniform and picked up her things which she had left on a chair.

The door clicked after her and Brenda was alone, but it did not seem to her that she was alone. It seemed as if in another chair right across from her, was sitting another Brenda, who was talking to her.

She was aware of the other Brenda even when Mrs. Johnson was still in the bedroom putting Lally to sleep with her strong tender hands, although the other Brenda wasn't speaking then. She was now, however. She was speaking quite clearly although no one but Brenda heard her words.

She was saying, "There's a perfectly good reason to believe that he's falling in love with you. Didn't he come down to the office to get you to go to lunch with him? Didn't he meet you at the street car tonight? Didn't he ask you to go for a walk with him tonight?"

Brenda, the real Brenda, would answer, "He just happened to be downtown."

"Don't you know he practically never goes downtown? Weeks go by and he doesn't go downtown, and besides the library is five miles from the Tower Building.

"He hates going to town, you've heard him say so. And you've got to face the fact that he might be falling in love with you, because it's not only your problem. It's Lally's, too. Now what are you going to do about it?"

"I just can't see him again——"

Brenda saw the snicker on the other lips that were hers, too, and yet not hers, because she could not be two bodies and two minds again! When he comes here all the time, and you're here, you'll just not see him again. You'll make yourself invisible, I suppose."

"I can tell him not to come any more——"

"And what about Lally? She wants to know why he doesn't come, and when you tell her——"

"No! I can't tell him not to come!"

"Then what are you going to do?"

There was no answer to that and Brenda sat staring at the chair in which there had been no other person at all.

Washington Government Worker To Participate in Cooking Test

Mrs. Frances Irwin Among Six Winners to Compete in New York.

MRS. FRANCES MAURINE IRWIN, a Washington business woman, is listed among the six sectional winners who will take part in the "cook-off" to win the title of 1936 national cooking champion at the Women's National Exposition of Arts and Industries which opens at the Grand Central Palace in New York City, May 23.

Mrs. Irwin left for New York yesterday to arrive in time for the "cook-off" as scheduled by the exposition's committee. The contestants will prepare their meals in groups of two and as each two women complete their dinner menu from appetizer to dessert, the judges, who will be a group of leading cooking experts and dietitians, headed by Miss Isabel Ely Lord, former director of the home economics department of Pratt Institute, will sit at a fully appointed dinner table in a booth adjacent to the kitchen booth and taste the dinners.

This competition, which was created with the purpose of demonstrating that the same skill and ingenuity in creating new and palatable dishes can be applied to time-saving canned foods as well as to other foods, was the most difficult one the judges said that they had ever handled because the quality of the menus was so high throughout, excellent as to form and manner in which they were presented and in the caliber of the dishes listed. The committee in choosing Mrs. Irwin's menu as the sectional winner of the fifth district stated that her menu was noteworthy in the contest not only for the quality of the dishes listed, but for the exactness which all directions were given, the appetite appeal of the dishes and their general quality.

Mrs. Irwin said the subject of this year's competition, especially appealed to her because she combined the two important interests of running a home and holding a position in the Treasury Department. "Naturally," she said, "with my double duties I have found daily trips to the market an impossibility, and have taken full advantage offered in cooking and menu planning by the vast supply of canned goods available."

The judges in making public their announcement of the six sectional winners brought out interesting features about the types of menus that characterized the regions of the United States. California, Iowa and Colorada cooks sent in the most spectacular recipes. Texas, Florida and the other Southern States, the judges noted, sent in the most luxurious menus. New England was represented by the great number of fish dishes and simple vegetable combinations, while the Middle Western States sent in typical menus made up of easily prepared meat and vegetable dishes.

The recipes showed biscuits and potatoes to be among the most popular American foods. Southern cooks still have baked ham as the chief piece of interest in any well set table; New England cooks emphasize fish and fish accessories; Middle Western housewives are partial to corn fritters and escalloped corn; California homemakers lean toward fruit salads and cocktails. Numbered among these favorites were appetizers such as olives, sardines and anchovies.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHAT'S A LADY to do! She no sooner gets one end of the house picked up than she comes on a spree of paper dolls in the other. Well, here's the advice our husband always gives us when we start popping all over the place over something that doesn't matter a lot anyway. "Oh, keep your shirt tail tucked in."

Another way to keep at least the company part of the house presentable is to give the children plenty of places otherwhere in the house to do their worst. Make their own room comfortable for them to play in, of course, but they'll want to overflow into the rest of the house too. If the dining room and living room don't open directly into one another, a good plan is to have the living room nice and insist on the children respecting it and keeping their truck out of it. Then make the dining room a place where they can study, play or entertain their friends.

We know a lady who is in the midst of making this change right now . . . she is the one we were thinking of in the first paragraph when we mentioned paper dolls. She decided on a plain color waxed linoleum for the dining room floor—first because it makes a very handsome floor, and second because it is so practical where there are children. She selected a dark blue with a marbleized effect so that it wouldn't show foot marks. Her dining room furniture was walnut and rather nice—she got a rusty coral for the seats—then had the walls painted in bright yellow. At the windows she used yellow sheer curtains with brown sheer draperies over them.

Mock Calla Lilies Ideal for Garnishing

Ambitious housewives sometimes make what is called "Calla lilies for garnishing." These mock lilies, as it were, certainly add beauty to any table and they are not very hard to fashion out of sound, large white turnips.

First peel them, then cut crosswise in round circles about one-eighth inch thick. Soak slices in warm water until soft enough to mold and bend without breaking. Peel and cut as many long carrot slices as there are turnip circles. The carrot pieces should be size and shape of a calla lily petal. Stick a toothpick in one end of each carrot petal, then slip one softened turnip slice on each toothpick, having the toothpick in exact center of turnip slice. Now, with the fingers, catch bottom of turnip slice together, forming a cup or calla lily shape around carrot petal, tie with thread or cord to hold in place. Curve and tie top of turnip loosely with thread. Cut off most of toothpick at the bottom. Soak lilies in ice water or chill in refrigerator until ready to use.

When cold and crisp, lilies will hold their shape, and the upper string may be removed. Use for garnishing salads and other dishes.

You know just how things are going to turn out beforehand when you bake with

RUSSIAN CABBAGE SOUP.

To make this soup one should prepare some time before a highly seasoned soup stock. Starin, cool and remove fat; there should be three pints of stock when finished. Canned soup stock may be used, however.

SOUP STOCK.

2 pounds shin of beef
3 pounds veal bones
1 onion
1 carrot
2 stalks celery
Small piece of bay leaf
2 teaspoons peppercorns
2 teaspoons salt
Water to cover.

Bring content of pan to a boil; do not continue to boil, but simmer gently for about three hours, skimming if necessary.

CABBAGE SOUP.

3 tablespoons butter
1 slice onion
2 stalks celery, cut small
1-3 cup carrot cut in thin pieces
1-3 cup turnip, cut thin
½ cup small, thin pieces of potato
1 cup finely shredded cabbage
1-3 cup chopped boiled beets

Melt the butter in a soup kettle, add onion, carrot, celery and turnip; stir constantly until they begin to discolor and then add the soup stock, potato and cabbage. Cook until the vegetables are done, add beets, and simmer 5 to 10 minutes.

To be truly Russian, place a spoonful of sour cream on each serving and a spoonful of cooked tomato on that.

CONSTIPATION* MAY CUT DOWN YOUR ENJOYMENT OF LIFE

Long Neglected, It May Even Develop Serious Consequences

Common constipation* keeps you from being at your best. It causes discomfort, and may lead to headaches and loss of appetite. You feel below par, lack your usual vigor.

So many people treat this condition as a slight matter. But it can be the starting point of serious trouble. It contributes to a general run-down condition. With lowered bodily resistance, you are more likely to pick up the first chance infection you meet in your everyday routine.

Common constipation is due usually to insufficient "bulk" in meals. Fortunately, a delicious cereal supplies gentle "bulk." Within the body, the "bulk" in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, and cleanses the system.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, etc. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company as an effective laxative food for constipation.* Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Recipe Contest Sponsored by The Post Offers Prizes for Favorite Picnic Dishes

Half the success of a picnic depends upon a well-planned lunch. First of all, the lunch must feature foods that will appeal to the out-door appetite. But just as important as the appetite appeal of the food are its packing and carrying qualities. Sandwiches that get soggy upon standing, cake that breaks or crumbles, salads that become wilted or runny—all of these are don'ts as far as the picnic basket is concerned.

But what are some of the picnic dishes that have all the important packing and appetite appealing qualities? That is The Post's question to Washington housewives this week. The recipe contest sponsored by The Post requests your favorite picnic dishes this week. Cash awards will be given for the five most interesting picnic suggestions. The first prize is $5; the second, $3, and the three remaining prizes, $1 each.

The recipes which you submit may be for home prepared dishes to be carried via basket to the picnicking spot, or ones actually prepared over the picnic fire. Send your recipes to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your recipes in time to reach this office not later than next Saturday.

Women in Russia Make New Advance

Pravda Urges Unions Treat Them as Co-Workers.

Soviet women have taken another step forward in public life. At a recent meeting of the first all-union conference of engineers' wives in the Kremlin, plans were made for wives of industrial executives to improve living conditions and make factory communities more attractive.

Later, at the closing session of the conference, it was decided not to limit the organization to wives of executives, but to include the wives of all workers. An appeal incorporating this decision was addressed to women generally.

The periodical Pravda editorially urged trade unions not to obstruct the women's social work, as they have done in some localities and to treat them as co-workers and not rivals.

Capital Manners

By Margaret Wallace.

Much has been written on the subject of host and hostess and their duties in the entertainment scheme of our National Capital. Little is said on the most important elements of the success of all parties—the guests and the duties of the guests.

In return for the entertainment provided for them, guests at formal and informal functions have a definite duty to perform. The perfect guest is always agreeable and has the "light" touch of sociability. Since guests are invited to meet each other, the host and hostess naturally expect them to enjoy each other's company. At a party at which both men and women are present, nothing is more disturbing to the host and hostess than to have the men congregate in groups, and the women sit and talk among themselves.

This inclination to form separate men and women "huddles" is distressing to any hostess who wants her party a success, and it is the duty of the guests to co-operate in her efforts to adjust the situation. Very often the men guests are the chief offenders in creating this entertainment difficulty. They are either too shy or too unconcerned to make the necessary effort to assist the hostess. The men have the privilege of joining the groups of women and bringing the other men into the circle. They can suggest a visit to the punch table or a stroll on the lawn, or take a vacant seat near some lady or group of ladies.

Sometimes women guests fail to do their part in assisting the hostess by failing to meet the gentlemen half way in their efforts to entertain them.

Another situation distressing to any hostess is the two or three guests who spend the entire evening together, paying little or no attention to any other guests and confining their conversation strictly to their small circle.

Query—I entertained at a Sunday buffet luncheon party for the employes at my office. My wife arranged everything very nicely, and the party would have been a success if the men and women had talked and enjoyed the conversation of each other. But the women all sat along in a row while the men stood at the end of the dining room. They all seem on very friendly terms at the office and I have seen some of the younger men and girls going out to luncheon together. We have invited them on a picnic. Do you think it will be in good taste for me to ask the men to look after the women and to talk to them. We did not have an entertainment arranged beforehand at the luncheon. We intend to have croquet, ping pong and other games at the picnic.

Answer—Yes. It will be good taste for you to ask the men to help you entertain the women guests. Since you are to have games you can ask some of the younger men to be in charge and ask a group of girls to assist them.

Query. Does one have to be introduced at a party before it is proper to carry on a conversation with a fellow guest? Would it be good form to introduce yourself. May a lady guest speak to a gentleman guest without being introduced?

Answer. It is quite proper for fellow guests at a party to talk to each other, even if they have not been introduced. It is better to drift into conversation. It is also good form to mention your name or to ask the name of the person to whom you are talking.

Query. I have sent out invitations for a tea from 4 to 7. Of course, I will receive the guests. Do I remain at my post in the drawing room the entire time.

Answer. Yes. If the guests have all arrived at an earlier hour it will be proper for the hostess to leave her post provided she keeps a careful watch for late-comers and hurries forward at once to greet them.

Brazil Nuts Enrich Batter of Devil's Food Cake

If just looking at this Brazil nut enriched devil's food cake doesn't stir a lick of anticipation when it appears at your table for Sunday evening supper, nothing else will. And your enthusiasm will only wax the greater after the first bite, for few flavors blend so nobly as rich devil's food batter and ground Brazil nuts.

Brazil Nut Devil's Food Cake Is Attractive Dessert Variation

Distinctive Enough to Satisfy Most Fastidious, It Also Presents Charming Appearance; Seven-Minute Frosting Suggested.

FEW DESSERTS win popular acclaim in such generous measure as cake. Light, fluffy texture and good frosting invariably stimulate a lick of anticipation.

Each family, of course, has its favorite cake—the same old cake which time and again appears on the table by will of the majority. And good old "stand patters" will insist that this favorite can't be beaten. They are entitled to their opinion, but really, they miss taste thrills by thus stifling competition.

Those who like "just cake" in any way, shape or form so long as it is cake, and their sympathetic allies, the good cooks who bake them, appreciate an occasional change. To this large group a new kind of devil's food cake is suggested, choice as can be and strikingly original. It is distinctive enough to satisfy the most fastidious cake-eater and so good to look at that few can resist its charms. The secret of its flavor may be traced to the liberal use of Brazil nuts in the batter. It is quickly and easily made from the tried and true recipe given below. It keeps moist for a week, due to its high nut content.

Brazil Nut Devil's Food Cake.

½ cup butter
½ cup white sugar
1½ cups brown sugar
4 egg yolks
1½ cups sifted cake flour.
¾ teaspoon soda
¾ cup sour milk
1½ cups ground Brazil nuts
4 1-ounce squares melted chocolate
¾ teaspoon baking powder
2 egg whites.

Cream the butter and sugar together. Add the egg yolks. Beat well, add flour, sifted with baking powder and soda, alternately with milk. Add ground Brazil nuts and melted chocolate. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour batter into three greased eight-inch layer cake pans and bake 30 to 40 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 F. Frost with seven-minute frosting and decorate with Brazil nuts.

Seven-Minute Frosting.

2 egg whites, unbeaten
1½ cups sugar
5 tablespoons water
1½ teaspoons white corn sirup
1 teaspoon vanilla

Put unbeaten egg whites, sugar, water and corn sirup in upper part of double boiler. Beat with rotary egg beater until sugar is dissolved. Place over boiling water, beating constantly with egg beater, and cook 7 minutes, or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from fire. Add vanilla. Beat until thick enough to spread.

Buy Meats in Person.

It is better to buy meats in person rather than over the telephone. Your butcher can help astonishingly to put variety into your menus. A good butcher can prepare less expensive cuts of meat by proper cutting and larding so that they compare favorably with the more expensive ones in flavor and appearance.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Grace Moore Has Special Recipe for Delicious Onion Soup.

By Pattie Ellicott.

GRACE MOORE, the American opera and cinema star, was received in audience recently by the King of Demnark when she visited Copenhagen. The cable reports are that Miss Moore and royalty got on splendidly. It is fairly certain that the King, who is an epicure, was given Miss Moore's famous recipe for onion soup.

When she was in Washington a short time ago all her friends, and many of those who entertained for her, were presented with the recipe by the diva who is almost as good a cook as she is a singer.

Here is the Grace Moore onion soup recipe, in case she did not happen to give it to you on her Capital visit.

According to Miss Moore you first slice six medium-size onions. Cook them in two tablespoonfuls of fat until they have turned a delicious light brown. Then pour three cupfuls of stock or four cupfuls of boiling water into which beef bouillon cubes, four in number, have been dissolved.

Now for the tricky part of the recipe.

After adding one-half teaspoon of salt, teaspoon kitchen bouquet, and one-eighth teaspoon celery salt to this mixture with a speck of pepper, pour it into a casserole, with six rounds of bread on top of it. Then sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese. Do not cover the casserole, but bake it uncovered at 350 degrees until all the cheese is melted and well browned. Then invite six guests to partake of this dish literally fit for a king.

GRACE MOORE.

Culottes More Popular.

The fashion for culottes (divided skirts) is no longer confined to the active sports field, say stylists. They will be seen everywhere for all daytime occasions this summer. Last season saw them first spring into popularity for sailing, bicycling and beach wear.

Mannequins Go Nautical.

'Smiling Eyes' Just Illusion, Professor Says

Smiling eyes are largely an illusion, and would be changed to melancholy eyes if accompanied by a sad mouth expression, says Prof. Knight Dunlap, of the University of California in his new book, "Elements of Psychology."

It is the mouth, says he, and not the eyes, that gives a person a look of cheerfulness. He includes four photographs of a young lady. In the first she is smiling and in the second she is sad.

In the third picture the smiling mouth is attached to the sad eyes and the entire expresion is one of cheerfulness, while in the fourth the melancholy mouth is fitted to the smiling eyes and the total expression is quite definitely one of sadness.

Flowers on Lapels.

Surprise Dishes Pep Up Appetite

Baked Bananas Suggested for Housewives.

Every meal ought to have one flavor surprise to lift it out of the realm of the ordinary. Nothing steps up appetite or food enjoyment so much as a new taste sensation that "hits the spot." Try each of the following suggestions for "the one" meal surprise:

Baked bananas—Sprinkle liberally with either powdered cinnamon, clove or mace, or a combination of all three before making.

White sauce—Add ¼ teaspoon peppercorns, 2 whole cloves and ½ small onion to make it savory. Remove seasonings before serving.

Whipped cream—Whip ½ teaspoon cinnamon and 2 teaspoons powdered sugar into cream when using to top puddings and pies.

Pot cheese—Mix two tablespoons crushed caraway seeds into each cup cheese. Season plentifully with salt and pepper. Eaten with rye bread, this is a very Continental supper.

Frozen Roquefort Cheese.

Mash one cup Roquefort cheese with fork until smooth. Add heavy cream until cheese is of whipped cream consistency. Mix well. Put in ice cube pan without the partitions, or in small paper souffle cups. Set in mechanical refrigerator to freeze. Serve each portion on a plate with 3 sticks toasted rye bread, 3 inches long and ½ inch square. Strawberry jam is a delicious accompaniment.

1,800 Aged To Get First Checks Today

Average Here Is $25 a Month, Below That of Most States.

The first Government pay roll for the support of the indigent aged of the District has been approved and checks to 1,800 men and women 65 years or more will be sent out today.

Paul L. Kirby, assistant director of the Board of Public Welfare, affixed his signature to the mass pay roll yesterday afternoon and clerks began to make out the monthly allowances to those who met the requirements of the social Security act.

The payments for the month of April average about $25 a month per person. Although the payment is for the last month, it has been delayed in the offices of the board, the agency responsible in the District for the administration of old age pensions. The May allowance will go out by the end of the month, Kirby said.

Delayed in Payment.

"Many of the cases to receive payment now were approved by the first of April, but we have been delayed in getting the money to them," Kirby said.

The work of selecting those eligible under the provisions of the act was begun in February at the same time that a canvass of the blind eligible to receive Government funds was started.

"Twice as many old people applied for aid as were eligible," Kirby said.

The law provides that all aged to receive pensions must have lived five years of the past nine in the District and been continuous residents here for the year preceding application.

The greatest stumbling block to the approval of applications has been the proving of age, Kirby said.

Few Birth Records.

"It is almost impossible to prove your age without records, and there were no such things as birth records 65 or more years ago. We have accepted family Bibles and baptismal certificates as legitimate proof of aged, and some of the applicants have been most ingenious in producing evidence."

Under the provisions of the act, the Government pays one half of the monthly support of an aged person, up to a maximum of $15, but Kirby said in some cases only supplemental help was needed to support an old person in the home of a relative or friend.

"The average old-age pension in most States is $30, but we have not found quite that much necessary," he said.

One of the provisions of the act forbids public support of an aged person if relatives, "spouse, child, grandchild or father," is found capable of assuming the obligation.

"It hardly seems possible that any 65 or 70 year old person would have a father still alive," Kirby commented.

Those now supported in institutions are not eligible for the pension and Kirby said he anticipated no great number would leave their present places to apply for pensions in order to live in private homes.

Capper Visions 36 Dry States Within 10 Years

He and Thomas Address 150 at Celebration of School Alcohol Law.

Thirty-six States will be dry within ten years, Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, last night told a meeting of 150 persons at Central High School to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the District's alcohol and narcotic public school instruction law.

The audience applauded his remark that "Kansas has not changed its mind about liquor." But the greatest applause was given the 75 lusty voices of the Eastern High School Singers, directed by Paul DeLong Gable, for their rendition of the "Soldier's Chorus" from Gounod's "Faust," and the "Quartette," from Verdi's "Rigoletto."

The semicentennial was celebrated by a round of speeches tending to show that smoking and drinking are injurious, and asking the audience not to be discouraged by the apparent retrogression in morals as exhibited in repeal of prohibition.

Mrs. John S. Bennett, past president of the Woman's City Club, quoted a Johns Hopkins surgeon as telling Bishop James E. Freeman he would never perform a major operation on a woman who smoked.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, said:

"The first prohibition law was enacted 250 years before the birth of Confucius. It was limited to those who held public office. That is the place to begin."

Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, who had been criticised for his enforcement of the notorious anti-red rider, read a 15-minute speech on how well the school system had obeyed the smoking and drinking law which the group was celebrating.

Although the meeting was open to the public, J. Raymond Schmidt, chairman of the committee of civic organizations, which sponsored the meeting, announced:

"We have to collect $250 for the expenses of this celebration. In a few moments young ladies will advance with pie plates to give you the privilege of sharing the cost of this program. We chose pie plates so we could hear the ratle of silver."

Insurance Office To Honor Bulkleys

Senator and Mrs. Robert E. Bulkley, of Ohio, will be the guests of honor at a 6 o'clock garden party at Mrs. K.'s Tollhouse Tavern on the Colesville pike in Maryland this evening in honor of the opening of the Washington building and branch office of the Union Central Life Insurance Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Other guests of the evening will include about 30 members of the company's officers and staff in Philadelphia, Reading, Pa., Camden, N. J., Wilmington, Del., and Washington.

Harry Newman, of the home office in Cincinnati, who has been made managing director of the Washington office, which has just been located at 1430 K street northwest, will be host at the garden party.

Bashful Goat Goes Snooty, Wins Pupils' Pet Show Award

Curley's Owner Beams as Judges Present Ribbon; Lewis Breuninger Is Busiest Exhibitor, With Five Entries, Guarded by Hired Friends.

Curly, a bashful little goat which had been scrubbed to a pinky-white hue and adequately perfumed, snooted all the kittens, dogs, rabbits and turtles yesterday afternoon at the Friends Suburban School's annual pet show.

The dogs and other ordinary animals received awards for such small details as the shortest tails, longest ears and best voices.

But Curly was in a class all by herself. As her young owner, Elizabeth Lyon, beamed at the awarder of prizes, the little goat received a blue ribbon for being the most unusual pet in the entire show.

Almost all the grade school pupils had brought pets. Lewis Breuninger was the busiest youngster at the show. He exhibited five entries and since an attendant was required to look after each animal, Lewis had to hire four other youngsters to help him. For the price of an ice cream cup they guarded over Sambo, a black cat; Graybrother, a rabbit; and a turtle and a lizard, both nameless.

Lewis devoted most of his time to a wire-haired fox terrier, Nibbs, but frequently made the rounds of his other exhibitions.

"I'll surely win something," he grinned. He was right. The sheer number of his entries was too much for the judges. They gave a blue ribbon to Sambo, his cat, for having the fluffiest fur.

Richard and Donald Beyer took turns looking after their entry, three kittens. On the front of the box was printed: The Three Triplets, Broomsticks, Dynamite, Fleasy.

The school grounds at 3901 Wisconsin avenue, were gay and colorful with bright paper streamers, small pavilions and spectators in summery clothes.

Before the judges, mothers of some of the youngsters, announced the awards everybody made the rounds of the booths and exhibit tables time after time to look at the white mcie, the newly hatched moth, three fleas under a magnifying glass, a miniature flock of garrulous crows, a couple of baby ducks in a bird cage, a cat reclining on a four-poster bed, which wasn't much larger than a cigar box.

Te guests, encouraged by the youngsters, also visited a hobby show in the gymnasium. High school pupils were the exhibitors for the most part. Alive Sze, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, had several dolls on display. Young Champ Clark had a collection of canes.

Everybody gathered on the lawn as Dr. Albert E. Rogers, new headmaster of the school, read off the list of prizes and handed out the ribbons. The following received awards. Elaine Keroes' Irish setter, handsomest dog; Ross Compton's German shepherd, most intelligent and best behaved dog; Harry Zehner's Mexican Chihuahua, the cutest; Donald Crisp's dog had the shortest tail; Clarence Norman's the longest ears.

Sarah Booth Miller's was the best groomed; Patsy Ferry's, the oldest. It had attained 13 years. Richard Marble's snails were the smallest pets in the show; Jack Somerville's pony the largest and most useful. Mary Estabrook's rabbits were adjudged the best family. Lorna Morley's crawfish was declared the best named. She had christened him Mussolini, "because he grabs everything he wants."

Christian Morley had the prettiest cat, Dan Murph had the largest rabbit, Mollie Kramer the tamest bird, Howard Loos the bird with the best voice, and Edward Wynne had the bird with the prettiest feathers.

Kal Is Re-elected Advertisers' Head

Unopposed, Normal C. Kal, head of a local agency bearing his name, last night was re-elected president of the Advertising Club of Washington.

Other officers elected: James Rotto, Lansburgh's, first vice president; George F. Kindley, Edgar Morris Sales Co., second vice president; Charles J. Columbus, trade and public relations counsel, secretary; W. N. Freeman, Washington Shopping News, treasurer; J. A. Anderson, Sanitary Grocery Co.; G. B. Burruss, Peoples Drug Stores; James W. Hardey, Woodward & Lothrop, and A. D. Willard, jr., Columbia Broadcasting System, directors.

Willard lectured on the use of radio in promoting sales. He described the slogan, "It pays to advertise" as a misnomer and said it should be changed to, "It pays to advertise properly and consistently."

Pupils Offer Safety Views At Rally Here

School Patrol Members Assail Recklessness of Autoists.

1,200 at First Session Hear Suggestions at Traffic Forum.

School children, members of the School Safety Patrol, climbed to the platform of the Labor Building auditorium last night and, without hesitation or fear of the 1,200 who were present, told in simple words exactly what they thought of America's automobile drivers.

On the stage and scattered through the audience were adults. The rest of the audience were school children, who are gathered here for the first annual convention of the A. A. A. School Safety Patrol.

With serious faces the children, who are organized throughout the country, scored reckless drivers. They even suggested alarm clocks for late sleepers who dart through traffic in a frenzied hurry to get to their office.

A boy from New Jersey broached the subject. He had been asked his opinion on some of the types of drivers who cause accidents and deaths. He said:

"I find late sleepers in our neighborhood cause a lot of trouble. They're in such a hurry to get to their offices they don't care what they hit."

Others Agree.

Other boys and girls—white Sam Browne belts, emblems of the organization, slung across their chests—nodded their assent and added suggestions.

One boy who still wore knee breeches spoke like a Southern orator:

"We of this generation must stand together. We must have a right to live. We have as much right to live as those of other generations . . ."

His words were greeted by applause.

Another spoke:

"Because we are youngsters, adult motorists fail to regard our efforts to effect safety in school zones. But we are more than youngsters. We have—we are the only age group in the United States that has reduced pedestrian accident rate . . ."

Would Raise Age Limit.

One boy, in the changing voice of an adolescent high school student, offered a suggestion about his own generation. He advanced the theory young people should not be allowed to drive automobiles.

"It takes a steady hand and an alert brain," he declared, "to drive an automobile. Boys of 16 are too young to drive. I think the age limit for drivers' licenses should be hoisted."

Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, sponsor of the safety patrols which guard the life of children in school zones in 16 States, presided.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, welcomed the delegates to Washington.

Tells of Federal Agents.

H. H. Clegg, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told of the work of the Department of Justice agents.

Other speakers included Charles M. Hayes, first vice president, American Automobile Association, and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education.

Earlier in the day the children gathered on the White House lawn to hear President Roosevelt extol the school safety patrols.

The President told them he had wanted for a long time "to express to you personally my very keen interest in the excellent work you are doing for traffic safety."

The President told the children there were no school patrols in his childhood days, "because there were no traffic problems."

"From small beginning," he recounted, "the school patrols have grown into a great national organization which I understand 250,000 boys and girls are now enlisted to give daily protection to many millions of their school mates from the hazards of traffic."

It was rumored that inmates of the Zoo's birdhouse remarked "Let them put their birdseed on the line and we'll perform" after they had refused yesterday afternoon to trill their dulcet notes over the N. B. C. network for the Greater National Capital committee.

Dr. William W. Mann, Zoo director, put it down to stage fright when his fine feathered friends failed to co-operate with the announcers, but the star of the aggregation, the Hill Myna, was heard to whisper the famous phrase, "How about the appropriations?"

Hill Myna's remarks were translated as meaning that a paying sponsor might persuade the birdies to perform.

"After all, this is not an amateur hour," a penguin yclept Little America wiscracked.

But the broadcasters were prepared with E. Ross Allen, director of the Florida Reptile Institute, Institute, who imitated some of the rebellious warbles, and part of the air time was filled by interviews of various members of the Zoo staff.

A Little Wanderer Sleeps

Girl Wanderer, 3, 'Reclaimed' After Visit to Receiving Home

Little Nellie Taylor, pretty blonde 3-year-old, was taken home to her mother last night after an afternoon and evening spent at the Receiving Home.

The child had been found at Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue early in the afternoon. Her white dress was soiled and she was barefoot, but happy.

Her name, she told Mrs. C. W. Alexander, of the Women's Bureau, was Jeanette Colter. Turned over to the Receiving Home, she soon burst into tears and was put to bed. Exhausted from wandering, she fell asleep immediately.

Name, Jeannette Colter. Calling, none. Age, 3. Married or single, single. Nativity, United States. Read and write, yes. Charge, lost.

That's the way the card looked which admitted Nellie to the Receiving Home.

Police officials began checking for her relatives, but were unsuccessful.

Police Answer Strike Riot Call At Truck Firm

Discover Mechanics Only Encouraging Pickets in Front of Plant.

The first "outbreak" since union auto mechanics went on strike more than a week ago apparently was a washout.

Police received a riot call from the General Motors Truck Co.'s branch at 30 M street northeast last night and dispatched three scout cars and two headquarters cruisers.

When the police arrived they found only about 20 striking mechanics standing about discussing the strike and encouraging the pickets in front of the plant. The pickets said they had been warned by the management that unless they left two truckloads of men would come and make them leave. The pickets then called their union's headquarters, which dispatched a few men to see that the pickets were not molested.

Packard Employes Strike.

Union officials yesterday added a tenth automobile concern to their strike list when mechanics quit at the Packard-Washington Motor Car Co.

Determined to spread the strike to all local dealers who refuse to meet wage and working hour demands, Oliver N. Garrison, business agent of the International Machinists' Union, estimated that 34 men walked out of the Packard Co. Earlier, eight men left the Sterrett Operating Co., 30 M street northeast.

His strike order followed a conference Thursday at the Labor Department when terms were discussed with Oscar Coolican, president of the Packard firm and also president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association. Although details of the meeting were not disclosed, it was understood that no agreement was reached. Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, also was present at the conference.

Seeks 44-Hour Week.

The union is asking for 90 cents an hour, a 44-hour week and time-and-a-half for overtime work.

Local dealers, meanwhile, continue to maintain their stand on an "open shop" policy.

The District Department of the American Federation of Government Employes voted last night to send the local mechanic's union its sympathy toward the strike now being conducted.

Welfare Unit Plans Bureau For Cripples

New Division Is Created to Give Proper Care for Children.

D. C. Commissioners Expected to Approve Measure at Once.

A new division for the care of crippled children was created yesterday in the Board of Public Welfare.

The details of the organization which will include the listing of every crippled child in the District, now are before the District Commissioners, where no opposition is expected to its approval. It will then go to the Children's Bureau for the final word and here, too, welfare officials expect its way to be smooth. The whole plan is expected to be in full operation by the middle of the summer.

This announcement was made by Paul L. Kirby, assistant director of the Board of Public Welfare, who personally drew up the plan which will supplement and co-ordinate all the work being done for crippled children in the District.

Funds for the work were made available under the social security act. Administation of the project was given by law to the District Commissioners, who in turn delegated the task of setting up a plan and putting it in operation to the Board of Public Welfare. Here it was considered important enough for the creation of a special division, the head of which will be announced later.

To Stop Duplication.

"The work of the division for the the care of crippled children will not displace or duplicate any work now being done for them," Kirby said.

"We plan to enlarge some of the clinical facilities for diagnosis and treatment and although much is being done, there is much more to do."

The plan will start operation with a survey to list every crippled child in the city, rich and poor alike. The reason for this, he said, was to offer hospital treatment or care to those who could not afford a private physician and to assure themselves that families able to afford proper treatment for their children had their attention drawn to the necessity for it.

"An intelligent beginning is to register and know every crippled child in the District," he said.

"The law allows us to work with children up to the age of 21. The non-indigent child will be registered also to show that he is receiving the care of a physician."

The survey will be done through co-operation with existing agencies, and among them Kirby listed the school census, the social agencies, the Bureau of Contagious Diseases, which would list cases of infantile paralysis; the department registering births, which would report crippled infants and the tuberculosis clincs, where children are often affected with bone malstructures.

Work Outlined.

"This all began when the social securities act provided a sum about equal to that already being spent in the District for the care of crippled children," Kirby said.

"We had no idea what our expenditures for that purpose were for they had never been segregated as such. We made a study and found that we were spending about $25,000 for that specific purpose in various institutions.

"An additional $20,000 or $25,000, which the act gives us will make a great difference in what we can do. It will mean that we now can provide follow-up care for children needing operations or special treatment.

"For instance, if a child is being watched at the Children's Hospital and it was decided an operation was necessary, we would expect the child to come to the Gallinger Hospital for that. If that is not feasible, we now are in a position to use this fund to pay for the operation, where it is thought to be necessary. There are endless circumstances like that which we will now be able to care for."

Park Lure

Shenandoah National Ideal Now, for Visit.

To Washingtonians looking for a place to drive this week-end, the National Park Service yesterday held out as bait Shenandoah National Park in not-so-distant Virginia.

Park Superintendent J. R. Lassiter was quoted as promising 20 or more flowering plants and trees will be at their best for visitors this week-end.

The park service announcement reads like some nostalgic blurb from a Florida chamber of commerce:

"Black cherry, choke cherry, hawthorn and mountain laurel mass the mountainsides with drifts of white, against which are contrasted the blooms of the purple azalea and Allegany menziesia," it rhapsodizes.

"Wild strawberry blossoms, violets, early buttercups and bluets carpet the ground in a rainbow mosaic, in which wild geranium, moccasin flowers, yellow lady's slipper and phlox contribute each their distinctive hue."

Picnickers also will find an abundance of red ants to share luncheon spreads although the park authorities said nothing about this.

Premiere Given Grace Moore's Newest Picture

'King Steps Out' at Earle; Gay Comedy at the Fox; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE KING STEPS OUT." Columbia Pictures' filmization of a screen play by Sidney Buchman, with music by Fritz Kreisler and lyrics by Dorothy Fields, starring Grace Moore, with Franchot Tone, Walter Connolly, Raymond Walburn, Victor Jory, Elisabeth Risdon, Nana Bryant, Frieda Inescourt, Thurston Hall, Herman Bing, George Hassell and Johnny Arthur. Directed by Joseph von Sternberg. Previewed on Monday, May 18.

Staged in impeccable taste and with genuinely regal splendor, skillfully acted by a judiciously chosen cast of notables and photographed with the eye of an artist, a thoroughly conventional Viennese operetta here is lent distinction by the melodic beauty of its score and the brilliant singing of its star.

BELL.

The story of the princess betrothed by her mother, for reasons of court prestige, to a ruler she does not love, and the adventures encountered by a hoydenish sister intent upon her rescue from the intolerable situation so that she may marry the Emperor's orderly, to whom she is secretly plighted, has been told upon the stage and screen in romantic comedies and glittering opera bouffe many times before. Seldom, however, has the threadbare theme been accorded such gorgeous embellishment and such romantic and comic enrichment as it enjoys in the present instance.

From the first glimpse of the Bavarian dooryard with which the picture opens to the final incident of its vivacious and fast-moving tale of imperial dalliance, maidenly intrigue and an astonished court, "The King Steps Out" reflects the thought, the effort and the punctilious care that have been expended to make it worthy of Fritz Kreisler's haunting melodies; Grace Moore's incomparable voice and the mimetic gifts of its superlative cast. Almost, it is the embodiment in light and shadow of the old adage that "fine feathers make fine birds." Nothing more beautiful to the eye and ear is apt to happen along in any cinema "season."

Star in Versatile Mood.

In the role of Elizabeth, "Cissy," the incorrigible member of the aristocratic household of Maximilian of Bavaria and his frau, Louise, sister of the Dowager Empress Sofia, of Austria, Miss Moore has a role that provides every opportunity for spirited character portrayal, amusing antics and superb singing. Her excursion to the summer palace of her aunt and cousin, the handsome young Emperor Francis Josef, whom her sister, Helena, thinks she does not wish to wed, is productive of all manner of hilarious situations, since she is mistaken for a village dressmaker at "court" where she and her vacillating father do a bit of conniving against the rest of the family and the father, individually, against the entire Austrian beer supply.

When the ingenuous and ingenious little modiste engages the interest of the susceptible young monarch, the clandestine meetings range through the carnival celebration of the Emperor's birthday in the village to a private dining room in the wayside tavern of one Herr Pretzelberger. When the truth finally comes out, as truth has a sometimes disconcerting way of doing, it finds Helena united with her Palfi, "Cissy" married to the Emperor and their elders endangered by shock and high blood pressure. No doubt you recognize the design woven into this durable dramatic fabric.

During the course of the action—and not always with entire justification from the standpoint of plot development—Miss Moore finds occasion to sing several of Kreisler's most musicianly compositions, to which effective lyrics have been set by Dorothy Fields. Not the least notable of these is "The Old Refrain," perhaps the best number in the score as the star sings it.

Tone Is Adroit Ruler.

Franchot Tone assumes the role of the Emperor with complete success and that capable British actress, Elisabeth Risdon, contributes the best of the play's serious impersonations as his mother. Frieda Inescourt is the harassed sister, who wishes she had taken the Emperor, after "Cissy" has won him, and Victor Jory is the Palfi who actually wins her hand. The veteran, George Hassell, Raymond Walburn and Thurston Hall are well cast in comparatively minor roles.

The comedy is served with an abundant hand by Walter Connolly, the wassail-guzzling Maximilian; Herman Bing, as Pretzelberger, the innkeeper who speaks English that suffers a compound fracture every time he opens his lips, and Johnny Arthur, chief of the well-named secret service. Everything important was a secret from him!

Glee Club Scores Hit.

The Radio City Music Hall Glee Club, a handsomely costumed and well-drilled male chorus of 24, headlines the stage portion of the bill in two appearances, featured by the "Soldiers Chorus," "Boots and Saddles" and a medley of tunes of "The Gay '90s." This vocal unit, under the expert conductorship of Miss Vin Lindhe, who directs from the orchestra podium, is one that should by all means be heard.

Saul Grauman and Company, the company consisting of four energetic and buxom young feminine dancers, offer a musico-terpsichorean novelty in "The Stairatone" and Freddie Dosh produces an amazing succession of realistic disturbances in imitation of all manner of commotions, from dog fights to railroad locomotives and soaring airplanes.

The newsreel and Freddie Clark's orchestral interludes complete the bill signalizing the Earle Theater's world premiere of a feature that reflects Josef von Sternberg's genius for colorful direction and its star's voice at their best.

A Princess Sets Out for the Royal Court!

When the petulant "Cissy," a Princess of Bavaria, decides to "rescue" her sister, Helena, from a distasteful royal marriage, she discovers that her mother and sister have impressed all of the horses into service, so she does the next best thing, as pictured above—much to her pappy's discomfiture. "Cissy," of course, is played by Grace Moore; her noble father, Maximilian, by Walter Connolly. All this comprises one of the most amusing scenes in "The King Steps Out," now occupying the screen at the Earle Theater.

Loew's Fox

"ONE RAINY AFTERNOON." Mary Pickford-Jesse L. Lasky picturization for United Artists of "Monsieur Sans Gene," by Pressburger and Rene Pujal, adapted to the screen by Stephen Morehouse Avery, starring Francis Lederer, with Ida Lupino, Hugh Herbert, Roland Young, Erik Rhodes, Joseph Cawthorn, Countess Liev de Maigret, Donald Meek, Murray Kinnell, Mischa Auer, Elly Malyon, Richard Carle, Lois January, Secer Ellis and Margaret Warner. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Previewed on Tuesday, May 19.

It is astonishing how many different things can happen to a man who makes the tactical blunder of kissing a girl—especially if it happens to be in a motion picture theater in Paris on a wet day and the girl is the daughter of a famous newspaper publisher whom the man never has seen before in his life!

Such was the comparatively innocent gesture on the part of Philippe Martin, actor, that set in motion all of the amazing developments that transpired "One Rainy Afternoon," following a clandestine meeting with the slightly indiscreet wife of the Minister of Justice.

Philippe had seat 66 in the cinema and Yvonne seat 68. But Philippe made the initial social error of getting his stub upside down and so was ushered to seat 99—when he thought sufficient time had elapsed to make it appear that he and Yvonne were not together. And that is how he came to be seated next Monique Pelerin, who slapped his face right soundly for him when he did her the favor of kissing her ardently during a scene of some emotion on the screen.

And that, furthermore, is how the president of the Purity League came to put the finger on him, as the saying goes, and have him haled into court and then tossed into the Bastile for a few days of cooling.

Perfidious Fame.

That jail sentence really was the genesis of the whole subsequent mess. The papers took up the story of the "monster" who attacked innocent young girls in motion picture theaters, he lost his job at the theater, then got it back again because he had become a "name;" Monique gave the boy friend the chill, the Minister of Justice finally got into the case and took his wife to the big first night, at which Philippe was starred and so on and so on.

From this hazy resume of a few of the major occurrences that lead to a romantic climax and denouement, it may be gathered that "One Rainy Afternoon" is by way of being a Parisian farce of the powder-puff variety, aimed at nothing but a breezy interval of frothy entertainment enacted by a group of funny fellows, and their girls, who understand precisely how such things should be done. Such a conclusion would be eminently correct.

"One Rainy Afternoon" is an innocuous trifle that still contrives to be interesting and amusing by virtue of the expertness of the principals comprising its cast. Francis Lederer, victim of all the hullabaloo about nothing, divided by two, has a way with him. He sings rather well, when he must, and comports himself quite in the accepted manner of young men caught in his successive predicaments. In the rink scenes, he doesn't know how to skate precisely like a young man who doesn't know how to skate—which, of course, is realism at its zenith. In the opposite role of the kiss' victim, Ida Lupino plays with charm and considerable poise for one of her youth.

Herbert Has a Time.

Hugh Herbert virtually runs away with the picture as Toto, Philippe's roommate and closest friend. Roland Young, as the theatrical impresario, is well enough cast, even bursting into song on occasion, and Joseph Cawthorn plays the gal's father without dialect.

Matching the gayety of the major feature at the Fox this week is a stage bill of comparable variety and lightness.

Gertrude Niesen headlines the vaudeville with a group of songs which she sings vigorously in her deep, throaty contralto—"Broadway Rhythm," "If I Should Lose You," from "Rose of the Rancho," and a Spanish number with a trick name.

Ballet Returns.

The bill is opened by the 12 young women constituting the Elida Ballet, back for a return engagement and closely followed by the three Fonzal Brothers, musical acrobats and rough-and-tumble comedians. The ballet appears again, with Janette Hackett featured as solo dancer, and then Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, just home from six months in England and on the continent, stop the show cold in its tracks—or did yesterday afternoon—with their songs, badinage and superlative dancing. Then comes Miss Niesen, and finally another spectacular ballet number, with Miss Hackett and a sailboat that forgot to sail for a minute yesterday.

The Fox Movietone News, a Paramount pictorial and Phil Lampkin's "Dance of the Hours" overture augment a program that is breezy and bright, even if not especially "big."

"SMALL TOWN GIRL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Ben Ames Williams, adapted to the screen by John Lee Mahin and Edith Fitzgerald, starring Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor, supported by Lewis Stone, James Stewart, Binnie Barnes, Andy Devine, Elizabeth Patterson, Frank Craven, Isabel Jewell, Edgar Kennedy and William Fung. Directed by William M. Wellman. Reviewed Friday afternoon (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

"Small Town Girl" presents the story of love finally coming to those united in matrimony while under the stress of unusual circumstances. The lines, especially in the opening sequences, are breezily witty and the acting the best the principals have recently done. The leads are played by Janet Gaynor and Robert Young, with Lewis Stone and Elizabeth Patterson the groom's intelligent and likeable parents, Binnie Barnes, the "other woman;" Isabel Jewell and Andy Devine, the bride's sister and brother-in-law—not forgetting Edgar Kennedy as the yacht captain, and William Fung, the steward.

Were one to single out the better performances they probably would be those of the co-stars and the Messrs. Stone, Kennedy and Fung. The lines of the play have a tendency to be technical at times, but there are many good spots of dialogue.

Two short subjects, narrated by Pete Smith, "Racing Canines," dealing with greyhounds and the mechanical rabbit, and "Let's Dance," presenting Dave Gould with exhibitions of various creations, including the new "Tap-along."

The Metrotone News and the Will Rogers Memorial Fund trailer, featuring Lowell Thomas, Bing Crosby, Shirley Temple, Irvin S. Cobb and May Robson, complete the program.

"ECSTASY." Eureka release of the Slavia-Films production, featuring Hedy Kiesler, supported by Jaromir Rogoz, Aribert Mog and Leopold Kramer. Music and lyrics by Kola Jozsef, Hadju Imre, Henry Gershwin and William Colligan. English dialogue by Jacques A. Koerpel. Directed by Gustav Machaty. Reviewed (fifth week) by W. A. Whitney.

Marking the fifth consecutive Saturday morning on which the above italicized paragraph has appeared in the columns of this journal, it would be superfluous to comment further on the picture "Ecstasy," whose merits as vouchsafed here on April 25 have been subsequently attested by thousands of the paying public.

In complete possession of all house records, "Ecstasy" is, indeed, a worthy exhibition thus to be honored. Its highly emotional theme, exquisitely interpreted, largely in pantomime, by Hedy Kiesler, and beautifully photographed in typical European "art" manner, the picture presents what is quite the acme, to date, of symbolic artistry.

Among the short subjects admirably selected for this program, are a cartoon version of "Don Quixote;" a travelogue, "In Old New Orleans," and a new issue of the Pathe News.

Penwomen

"AN EVENING OF ONE-ACT PLAYS BY PENWOMEN." The Laboratory Little Theater of the District League of American Penwomen presents three short plays, directed by Rose Robinson Cohen, with properties by Minnie Briggs, costumes by Grace Rebecca Sahm and sets by Harold Colborn. At the Burlington Hotel May 22. Previewed Thursday evening (final rehearsal) by W. A. Whitney.

THE PROGRAM.

"OVERTONES." Psychological drama, by Alice Gerstenberg.

"I SHALL BE WAITING." Drama, by Florence R. Kahn.

Among the amateur and semi-professional acting groups of Washington—which number has been estimated to be 100—there has been none whose sole purpose is to play the thespian guinea pig, presenting manuscript plays with a view to determining suitability for further, and perhaps professional, production. Last night, however that hiatus among local drama groups was closed, when the Laboratory Little Theater of the District League of American Penwomen offered its inaugural program.

That there might be a standard of comparison, so to speak, the group included Alice Gerstenberg's "Overtones," separating the maiden presentations of Emily Maxwell Maddox's "Morning Devotions" and Florence R. Kahn's "I Shall Be Waiting."

It is the purpose of the new group to act as the laboratory where new plays by dramatists from all branches of the league may be sent, expertly considered, and produced under capable direction by the better actors of the city.

"Morning Devotions" is scarcely a play—but a comedy skit, revealing the great American husband and wife in their matutinal conflict over coffee and burned toast.

Play Is Well Written.

Florence R. Kahn's "I Shall Be Waiting," the second of the original works of the evening, is nicely turned playwriting, with nicely drawn characterizations and a situation pregnant with drama and tense expectancy. Carl Standing, convicted embezzler, has escaped from prison and to prevent the blind mother from learning the truth, Joan the daughter, has fabricated a tale of South American business. But the boy returns home and the mother hears him, yet even this the daughter is able to explain away, but when a delivery boy inadvertently reveals the truth to the mother, the structure of white lies crumbles.

The Gerstenberg play is one of the earlier attempts at dramatizing psychoanalysis, presenting the conflict between two women's cultured and primitive selves—sort of a "Strange Interlude" with actual characters representing the four personalities.

Sierra Comedy Is Well Played At King-Smith

Playhouse Company Enacts Frothy Spanish Piece With High Credit.

THE CAST.

Rosario ..... Rebecca Tarwater
Dona Barbarita ..... Margery Hood
Maria Pepa ..... Sara Snipes
The Apparition ..... Paul Walter

A frothy bit of Spanish comedy was added to the growing list of fine productions by the King-Smith Playhouse when last evening G. Martinez Sierra's "The Romantic Young Lady" was presented with near-professional precision. Apparently with a twinkle in his eye and his tongue in his cheek, Senor Sierra penned a bit of theatrical meringue glace which seems more than it actually is.

Essentially, the story is mildly satirical, dealing with a modern young lady who is, actually, quite romantically inclined. The jibes are gentle, the comedy genuine—but the story shrinks to a minor place in consideration of the sheer delight of the flow of words.

Rebecca Tarwater, whose version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was earlier produced by this same group, played the title role, demonstrating that her abilities as an actress far outshine hers as a playwright. Miss Tarwater was coldly aloof or warmly enthusiastic as the occasion demanded—and she had plenty of opportunity to be both.

Is Effective Apparition.

As the "apparition," Abdulio Gomez, yclept Luis Philippe de Cordoba for the benefit of his public, Paul Walter not only offered one of the best interpretations of his career but virtually topped the company for acting honors.

Margery Hood, as Miss Tarwater's grandmother, three times a widow, turned in a nicely read interpretation of a "Granny" who knew "when to fall asleep and when to wake up"! Sara Snipes did exceptionally well as Miss Hood's maid who managed, without listening, to overhear everything of importance which transpired.

In the supporting cast Vernon Knight, Raymond Casford and James M. Rawls played Miss Tarwater's brothers; George Farrington was a literary critic; Virginia Blackford appeared as maid to the author and Martha Newton, amanuensis, and Nonie Mitchell was the actress with whom the author and the brothers imagined themselves in love.

Canada-to-Mexico Plane Record Set

By the Associated Press.

Agua Caliente, Lower Calif., May 22.—Setting a new record for 125-horsepower planes, 20-year-old Peter Dana of Holderness, N. H., completed a Canada-to-Mexico flight down the Pacific coast today in 12 hours 34 minutes elapsed time and 11 hours 6 minutes actual flying time.

The young descendant of Richard Henry Dana and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow took off from Vancouver, B. C., at 4:01 Pacific standard time. He reached his goal here at 4:35 p. m.

His elapsed time excelled by 1 hour 13 minutes the record set last year by youthful Frank Kurtz, of Hollywood, former University of Southern California athlete.

En route, Dana stopped at Seattle, Wash.; Eugene, Oreg., and Redding, Delano and Los Angeles, Calif. He refueled at Los Angeles in six minutes and was off in 11 minutes after he landed, having picked up customs papers clearing him across the Mexican border.

The big German waddles along so quietly that apartment dwellers aren't even warned in time to rush to the windows . . . It ties up street traffic completely, however, cars and pedestrians halting in their tracks to gape at the goliath . . .From the gray snout streams the white searchlight, playing directly down on the skyscrapers . . . Up forward, the Zep's signal man operates a tinier spotlight in dots-and-dashes of color . . . What he spells out, I don't know, but I have a pretty good idea . . . The entire age is one of superlatives . . .The big Zep, the Queen Mary, the Normandie, the Empire State Building . . . What the world needs is a good 5-cent midget.

Darryl Zanuck is a brave little fellow; he's going to co-star Connie Bennett, Janet Gaynor and one other femme star in "Three Girls," which will be retitled "Headache."

Three of the most attractive girls I've ever seen have been non-professionals: Mrs. Irwin Regensburg, Mrs. Allan Ryan, and Gwen Heller . . . Judge McCooey's brother, Everett, would rather be a professional singer than anything else . . . His greatest thrill is to be urged to desert his table at the Biltmore or Astor and sing with the band . . . And he's surprisingly good . . . Billy Leeds, who will be married to Olive Hamilton within the next few hours aboard the S. S. Moana, likes to play the drums . . . He gives presents to band drummers who teach him new rat-a-tat-tats . . . The presents are the most expensive drum heads . . . Personally, I like to play a xylophone, but the feeling is not reciprocated.

Helen Hayes Wins Stage Award For Best Performance of Year

League Honors Native of D. C. for Portrayal of Queen Victoria.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 22.—Helen Hayes, who is playing the role of Queen Victoria on Broadway in the drama, "Victoria Regina," was announced winner today of the medal awarded annually by the Drama League of New York for the most distinguished performance of the year.

The medal, called the Delia Austrian Prize after an early member of the Drama League of America, was awarded last year to Katharine Cornell.

Miss Hayes, a native of Washington, received the medal at the New York league's twentieth annual luncheon in the presence of a number of actors. Channing Pollock was master of ceremonies.

Laurence Housman, author of "Victoria Regina," told Miss Hayes after seeing her in the play several months ago, "You were just like the queen, God bless her!"

The actress is the wife of Charles MacArthur, the writer. They have a 6-year-old daughter, Mary.

Jeweler Robbed Of $30,000 Gems

Toledo, Ohio, May 22 (AP).—Bandits slugged a New York City manufacturing jeweler in a daring robbery in the entrance of the Pennsylvania Railroad Station tonight and escaped with loot valued by the victim at $30,000.

The jeweler, Clare Glander, was relieved of his hand grip containing the jewels after being knocked down by two robbers in the outside corridor of the railroad station.

"Give us that bag," they curtly demanded, poking pistols into his sides.

Glander said he lifted one arm to resist when both men struck him with their weapons.

Shorb Wins Schoolboy Golf Medal

Billy Shea Is Runner-up in Washington Post Trophy Play.

By Dave Herman.

Alfred Shorb, 17-year-old Montgomery Blair golfer, won the medal in the 18-hole qualifying round of the Metropolitan schoolboy golf championship for The Washington Post trophy yesterday, carding a 78, eight over par, to outstrip a field of 75 high and prep school players in Washington and vicinity at Manor Club's course.

Shorb, whose only claim to local golfing fame is that of runner-up in the District municipal junior championship, covered the tough outgoing nine in 37, two over par, and staggered home in 41 to lead Billy Shea, 17-year-old Western captain and defending titleholder, by one stroke.

A trifle off form, the curly-haired Shea rounded the turn in 41, but stepped on the gas on the open back side and scored a 79, despite the fact that he played the last five holes in even par.

Scores of 86 qualified for the title flight, as the kid stars found Manor's greens an d fairways a trifle elusive, what with summer rules prevailing.

Late in the evening Bobby (New) Suit, of Roosevelt; Lafe Franklin, of Central, and Jack Robinson, of Roosevelt played off for one place, each tied at 86. Robinson triumphed at the second hole with a par three after Suit was eliminated at the first hole.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Boston, Mass., May 22.

Nothing, apparently, is as inspirationl as success and that perhaps accounts for the fact that two members of the Washington baseball cast, who last year were a pair of leaden-limbed performers, are now playing a brand of ball that deserves the description of great.

I mean Outfielder Johnny Stone and First Baseman Joe Kuhel. Despite their efforts, the Nats are not yet a .500 ball team in the league standings, but their individual performances this season constitute no less than a complete metamorphosis, unless I forget the meaning of the word.

POVICH.

A so-so hitter last season, good and bad in spots, Stone now is recognized as the most potent batting threat in the Nats' line-up. Stone, in some manner, has turned slugger. Extra-base hits are rattling off his bat with great frequency and he has compiled for himself thus far a .377 batting average. Opposing pitchers now work with great deliberation when facing him. Which is the tip-off.

Kuhel, too, has been tying into the ball. He no more resembles the .248 hitter of last season than I resemble Gable. His .287 average at this writing is a rotten libel. Kuhel has been meeting the ball on the nose in almost every turn at bat and encountering the ill-luck of slamming the ball directly into some outfielder's glove.

Their success with the bat, though, has inspired the in general all-around play. Stone, an easy going, not overly belligerent performer in past seasons; a fellow whose natural talents were recognized but hardly respected, is now something of a hell-cat both at the plate and on the bases. He is fighting for his hits and scurrying for those extra bases.

Kuhel, too, is a changed man. His matter-of-fact play that formerly characterized him as a businessman ball player is no more. At Cleveland the other day he warned Pitcher Oral Hildebrand to quit dusting him off and after a second offense challenged Hildebrand to a fight on the diamond. He ended up by telling Hildebrand that he'd cut him to ribbons with his spikes on the first opportunity offered a close play at first base.

The careers of professional ball players are shaped by the merest decisions of the gentlemen known as scouts. Washington doubtless would have won no pennants in 1925 and 1924 were it not for the fact that two integral members of those championship teams failed to impress enemy scouts in their days in the minor leagues.

Pitcher Fred Marberry and Third Baseman Ossie Bluege both were indirectly shunted to the Washington club by a scout for the Philadelphia Athletics, who failed to discern big league ability in either of 'em and failed to recommend their purchase by Connie Mack.

Bluege was playing shortstop for Peoria in 1921, when Scout Joe Engel, of the Nats, happened into the town and took a fancy to him. A scout for the A's already had an option on the fancy fielding young infielder, but failed to exercise it when Bluege hurt his knees sliding. Both Engel and the A's scout were scared away.

A month later Engel returned to Peoria and learned that the A's option on Bluege had expired. Still mindful of Bluege's injured knee, Engel insisted that Bluege race a half-dozen of his teammates in a 100-yard dash. When Bluege finished second in the race and showed no effects of his injury, Engel bought him for the Nats at $3,500.

Marberry was down in Little Rock during the season of 1923 when the same Athletics' scout looked him over. The big Texan, irked by a half-dozen errors made behind him, walked off the field at the end of the fifth inning and refused to return. The A's scout reported to Connie Mack that Marberry had promise but lacked courage and a good temperament.

Two weeks later, at the frantic request of Johnny Dobbs, one of his friends in the Southern Association, Clark Griffith personally went to Little Rock to scout Marberry. The Texan won a 1-0 game that day, struck out 12 and made three hits himself. Griffith paid Little Rock $8,000 for him on the spot.

Grove vs. Newsom On Program Today

Boston Hurler's Streak Snapped in Last Meeting.

Boston, Mass., May 22.—Grove vs. Newsom, the pitcher's battle that commands the interest of the entire league whenever Washington and Boston teams clash, again is on the program for tomorrow when the Nats open a three-game series with the Red Sox.

Newsom it was who was the victor in their last meeting. That was the occasion when he shut the Red Sox out, 4 to 0, in Griffith Stadium to halt Grove's winning streak at five games.

St. Louis May Request Public Parks Net Play

St. Louis, May 21 (AP).—A strong probability that St. Louis would invite the United States Lawn Tennis Association to hold the National Public Parks Tennis Tournament here in August, was seen tonight.

The general council of the Municipal Athletic Association voted to take such action, subject to approval of a special committee, which will sound out the U. S. L. T. A. on the situation.

The tournament was originally awarded to Boston, which withdrew its invitation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 22.—The Phillies, after losing five straight games, cut loose on the New York Giants today as they pounded out a 15-to-0 victory with Bucky Walter pitching four-hit ball.

The Phils slammed Fred Fitzsimmons and Dick Coffman for 16 hits, including home runs by Pinky Whitney, Walter and Ernest Sulik. They scored seven runs in the first inning, six more in the seventh and added a couple in between with Whitney driving in five of the tallies.

Dead Heat in 3d at Narragansett Results in 2 Payoffs on Double

By the Associated Press.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., May 22—A dead heat in the third race at Narragansett today between C. W. Phelan's Be Just and Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Charmed Eyes resulted in a split in the daily double pool and two pay-offs, the first time this has happened in New England racing. It was the second dead heat for first place at this meeting.

Fans who coupled Capt. Yarbrough, winner of the first race, with Be Just, received $221.50 each and those who wagered on Capt. Yarbrough in combination with Charmed Eyes received $40.10. The judges examined the official pictures with a magnifying glass but could not see that one horse finished ahead of the other.

Be Just paid $54.50, $38.20 and $16.70 and Charmed Eyes returned $9.70, $10.10 and 11.50.

Mrs. Doris Melanson's Happy Knot won the feature race on today's card, the Gaspee claiming stakes, Happy Knot finished two and a half lengths ahead of Joseph Bartell's Bubblesome, in 1:10 2-5, within a fifth of a second of the track record for six furlongs.

T. F. Swords' Vote Boy finished third, with the favorite, Mrs. H. Ughetta's Deduce, last.

Brevity Runs At Belmont Today

61st Running of Race to Be Worth $15,000 to Winner.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 22.—J. E. Widener's Brevity, unexpectedly beaten by Bold Venture in the Kentucky Derby, resumes his campaign for 3-year-old honors tomorrow in the sixty-first running of the Withers Mile at Belmont Park.

Winner of the Preakness as well as the Derby, Bold Venture was not among the ten 3-year-olds named for the $5,000 added event, but Brevity faces as imposing a field as that which lined up at Churchill Downs three weeks ago with the Widener chestnut the favorite.

Alongside Brevity at the top of the field stands C. V. Whitney's Red Rain, rated one of the best of the 2-year-olds last year. The Whitney colt was beaten a head by Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Delphinium, also named for the Withers, in his only start this year, but he ran a race that indicated he would furnish the Widener colt with strong contention tomorrow.

Both Have Good Jockeys.

Each will have the benefit of rides by two of the leading jockeys in the sport. Wayne Wright will be up on Brevity, seeking to swing back into the stride which carried him to victory in three rich stakes this year prior to the Derby, while Raymond (Sonny) Workman will be in Red Rain's saddle.

Brevity and Red Rain were the choices in the prerace figures, at 6 to 5 and 7 to 5, respectively, but there is enough class among the other entries to turn the tables on either of the stars if they fail to run to their best form.

Three of the colts which finished behind Bold Venture and Brevity in their bitter Derby duel have been entered. They are C. B. Shaffer's Coldstream, fourth at the Downs; E. R. Bradley's Bien Joli and Teufel from the Wheatley Stable. It was Coldstream that raced Red Rain to a dead heat in the Saratoga Special last year.

Mr. Bones Dark Horse.

The horse that is most likely to cause the favorites trouble, however, is John Hay Whitney's Mr. Bones. In his initial 3-year-old effort, the son of Royal Minstrel ran away from a field of his age at 7 furlongs. Back among also rans was Delphinium, generally regarded as one of the best of the 3-year-olds at a mile or less.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Memory Book, which trailed in the Preakness; Ogden Phipps' White Cockade, a stablemate of Teufel, and Alfred Gywnne Vanderbilt's Postage Due complete the field.

Although the race has only a $5,000 added value, the winner will receive close to $15,000 net as the result of the conditions which call for nominations as 2-year-olds and subsequent payments thereafter.

Cards Beat Pirates, 11-4; Deans Wins 6th

Pittsburgh, May 22 (AP).—Dizzy Dean scored his sixth pitching victory of the season today as the St. Louis Cardinals let loose with a barrage of 17 hits to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 11 to 4. The victory increased the Cards' lead over the Giants, who lost to the Phillies, to one and one-half games.

Runyan Explodes, But Does Not Blow Up

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., pro, shown as he played an explosion shot from a sand trap at Mamaroneck, N. Y., in the second round of the Metropolitan Open there yesterday. He played good golf to tie with Gene Sarazen at 138, for the lead.

Nats Overcome Elis by Late Rally, 8-1

New Haven, Conn., May 22.—The advantages of higher education proved nil, null and no help whatsoever as Yale's varsity baseball team flunked its test against Washington's big leaguers and collected an 8-to-1 beating.

Before 1,000 fans in the park across the street from the massive Yale Bowl, Joe Bokina, the Nats' tow-head rookie right-hander, who began shying away from school houses in his early teens, limited the proponents of higher learning to four hits.

For eight innings though, it was quite a ball game. In fact the teams went into the ninth in a 1-1 tie. But the Nats came out of it with seven runs scored against Bernie Rankin, the Elis' star halfback.

Hurling Duel.

Rankin was waging a clever duel with Bokina, feeding an assortment of slow stuff to the Nats' regulars, who played for six innings and the reserves who entered the game in the seventh. Six hits was the Nats' allotment in the first eight innings.

It was not until the seventh, incidentally, that the Nats tied the score. The Yales had taken a 1-0 lead in the third when Rankin singled and Kohlman walked. Rankin was forced by Cummings, but Horton singled to center, scoring Kohlman.

It was 1-1 after the seventh, when Reynolds led off with a single, took second on the centerfielder's error and eventually scored from third on Millies' long fly to right.

Rally Under Way

The Nats made it conclusive in the ninth. Kuhel walked, Kress singled to to right, Millies singled to center and a 7-run rally was under way. The shortstop's muff of a throw on Estalella's grounder put Rankin in a deep hole and before the inning was over Bluege had walked, Hill and Reynolds contributed a pair of doubles and Kuhel tossed in a single.

Bookie's 'Welsh' Suspends Service

Miami, Fla., May 22 (AP).—The Daily News said the reputed "welshing" on a $15,000 loss by a horse race bookmaker mysteriously resulted today in halting information service to all Miami "bookies."

The newspaper said information buyers were suddenly told they would get no more service until further notice.

While bets were taken by bookmakers this afternoon, winnings were not paid until results were obtained from regular newspaper reports.

It was reported that racing service was stopped after a Miami player bet $100 yesterday across the board on Mine Boy in the sixth at Narragansett. Mine Boy won, paying $353.60, $84.60 and $30.40.

The Miamian had "insured" his bet, which was to guarantee he would collect top odds paid by the "bookies" of $75, $50 and $25 to $1 for win, place and show. At these odds the bookmaker owed him $15,000.

Cooney's Double Gives Brooklyn 4-3 Victory

Brooklyn, May 22 (AP).—Johnny Cooney's single off Bill Urbanski's shins in the eleventh inning sent Jimmy Bucher home with the run that gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 4-to-3 decision over the Boston Bees in a slugfest today.

The Bees collected 12 hits and the Dodgers 11. Ray Benge held his former mates in check as the Bees went into the last half of the eighth leading 3-1. Cooney's double and George Watkins' triple reduced Boston's margin to one run and in the ninth Benge was driven from the mound when he walked Linus Frey and allowed Babe Phelps to double. Before his relief, Ben Cantwell, could retire the side, Jimmy Jordan sent a long fly to left, scoring Frey with the tying counter.

Tigers Outslug Indians, 13-10; Get 20 Hits

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 22.—The Tigers and the Indians hit the ball with everything but the flagpole today and when the dust cleared away Detroit had given Cleveland its fifth straight defeat, 13 to 10.

Elden Auker was the winning pitcher, although Chad Kimsey and Schoolboy Rowe had to finish up for him. Auker batted in four runs on three hits.

Detroit's 20 hits off five Cleveland pitchers included a homer by Goose Goslin, with none on bases in the ninth.

Among the Indians' 13 hits was a homer in the third inning by Earl Averill, driving in Gleeson and Hale.

In the seventh inning Simmons scored and Walker reached second on a maneuver which looked like an attempt for a double steal. Umpire Ormsby ruled Catcher Billy Sullivan had failed to touch Simmons with the ball, Sullivan was given an error and neither runner was credited with a stolen base.

Mel Harder, the starting pitcher, was charged with the defeat. His successors were Winegarner, Hudlin, Lee and Brown.

Auker was weak in the fourth inning, when he hit a batter, threw wide to first, and made a wild pitch. He lasted until the sixth.

Gehringer helped make the 2 hours and 55 minutes of baseball interesting by getting two doubles and a single, his double in the fourth scoring Rogell with the fifth and tying run.

Mahi Scores Easy Victory in Feature Race at Hagerstown

Jilted Scores In Opening Sprint

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 22.—Mahi, gelded son of Salmon-Trout, picked up 117 pounds and scored a handy victory in the Hotel Hamilton Purse, the feature race here today. Forging to the front at the starting signal, Mahi opened a long lead going to the first turn, saved ground at every bend and was simply coasting at the end of the 5-furlong event.

Nora's Grace did a lot of trying but was second ahead of Dixie Bee in the only part of the race that resembled competition. Five others answered the bugle call, but only four circled the track. Black Harmony, with Jockey Skeets Holland to match, huffed and puffed and threatened to tear the starting gates down. He was ordered to the outside on a hill and when the break came, he tossed Holland.

Mahi, which upset Stool Pigeon to win here earlier in the week, was prominent in the betting and paid $4.50 as the public choice.

Fowler Provides Sensation.

The riding sensation of the day was provided by Jockey Tommy Fowler. He was aboard Red Label in the second race. On the swing into the backstretch, the horse's saddle became loose and slipped down on Red Label's side. Fowler had his foot in one stirrup which was in the middle of his mount's back. Somehow, he managed to hang on and Red Label did the rest, galloping on to the wire a winner. Flower Time came from far back to be second ahead of Mazyniata, the favorite. Red Label provided an $8.40 pay-off.

Charles Jackson, old colored rider, piloted Jilted, an ancient mare, to victory in the first race. Jackson sent the daughter of Snob II to the front in cowboy fashion and led all the way to take a half-length decision from Sea Finn. Two lengths back came How—and to be third. Jilted was the favorite at a $4.20 mutuel.

Lets Play Triumphs.

Lets Play got all the best of the worst start of the meeting and galloped the 6½ furlongs to win with something to spare. Ridden by Sammy Palumbo, Lets Play was out in front of the stall gates when the start came. Palumbo straightened her out and she was never headed. Mintie and At Dusk, the two horses that suffered most at the break, were second and third. The winner paid an $8.80 mutuel.

Miss Tip Toe won her second race of the meeting in the fourth event and added to the score of J. B. Bond, the leading trainer. With Jockey Skeets Holland aboard, Miss Tip Toe had little trouble and defeated, among others, Dressmaker and Mersan. Sky Ride ran out at the turns. The winner was a heavily played favorite at a $3 mutuel.

Doeskin branched to the front after a walk-up start and made every post a winning one in the fifth race. Jockey L. Piker did a good riding job, and Doeskin had plenty of daylight to spare on Done Eued. Miss Patches, the favorite, salvaged third money. Doeskin paid an $11.80 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAPT. YARBROUGH, $9.90, $5.20, $3.60; YETIVE, $18.70, $9.60; JEANNE FETZKO, $4.80.

CAPT. YARBROUGH, quickest to begin, drew clear in the opening stages and, steadied along in front, was never threatened though ridden out smartly to the end. YETIVE followed in closest pursuit of the winner from the start, held on with good energy in the final drive. JEANNE FETZKO was forwardly placed throughout and was going stoutly at the end. ROBINS COVE, hard hustled from the start to enter into contention, was unable to make up any ground through the last five-sixteenths. DUSKY MISS made up some ground. HIGH HASTE was unable to reach the leaders. JAMESVILLE was cut off sharply nearing the far turn and had to take up. LOVELY DAY was knocked back soon after the start and had scant chance thereafter.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-old maidens and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:34. Off at 2:35½. Winner, J. W. Y. Martin's b. g. TUGBOAT worked his way up steadily in the first half mile, wore down LILLEEN when reaching the stretch and was driving out at the end. LILLEEN displayed good speed from the start, and a determined bid from ARTFUL PRINCE, then PLAYFUL BOSTON, disposed of these and, despite holding on stoutly, was unable to cope with the winner's bid. SOCIETY COLUMN, forced to take up sharply approaching the far turn, when caught in close quarters, was unable to gain clear sailing, but came willingly in the stretch, when clear. IDENTICAL closed a good run through the last three-sixteenths. CRESTON passed tiring horses. ARTFUL PRINCE had good early speed and was not unduly punished when he began tiring. PLAYFUL BOSTON stopped after displaying brief early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:32½. Winners (dead heat), C. W. BE JUST, quickest to begin, was rated along in front under steadying restraint, weakened inside the closing strides though lasting to gain a dead heat with CHARMED EYES. The latter, steadied along back of the pace, closed with good energy through the stretch, drawing on even terms at the finish. TRAMWAY responded gamely to hard urging and closed stoutly. BANK HOLIDAY finished with good energy. IRISH HERO was going gamely at the close. LOLOMA, well placed, dropped back after going three furlongs. UPPERCUT, shuffled back at the start and unable to gain clear sailing early, was never prominent though closing ground when too late through the stretch. JIM JOHN was outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MEROVECH, $4.90, $3.40, $2.70; MANYA, $6.20, $4.00; SIR KAI, $3.00.

MEROVECH, hard hustled from the outset, was kept under pressure in shaking off MANYA and drew clear through the last furlong. MANYA, on the outside while forcing the pace, responded gamely in the last few strikes to take the place from SIR KAI. The latter dropped back soon after the start and had to be vigorously ridden in order to reach contention, moved threateningly in the stretch, but weakened from his early efforts, faltered right at the end. CURLING displayed speed for the first half mile, tiring thereafter. GLITTER GLOW was unable to keep pace after breaking alertly. FORGET NOT had speed for the opening five-sixteenths. PROSECUTOR was under punishment after going the first furlong, dropping back steadily.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500; added. The Chaspee Claiming Stakes. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:37. HAPPY KNOT went to the front in the opening strides, drew away into a long lead and was never menaced though ridden out smartly to the close. BUBBLESOME, rushed under rough usage, urging nearing the stretch, responded gamely to punishment in the stretch and while unable to reach the winner, outgamed VOTE BOY at the end. VOTE BOY followed in closest pursuit of the winner from the outset, was never able to threaten and weakened in the last 70 yards. HAPPY HELEN was unable to keep up. DEDUCE would not extend himself under hard urging and was never a threat.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The V. F. W. Carnival Trophy. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:10½. ST. MORITZ took command straightened out on the backstretch, drew away into a good lead, increased his advantage steadily and was never threatened, winning with speed to spare. IDLE ALONG dropped back of the pace and, lacking her usual speed for the six furlongs, closed stoutly under hard handling. JODA, a prominent factor, placed throughout and just failed to last for the place. RAMUS was unable to improve his position under pressure. CAPT. JERRY weakened after going six furlongs. LONG BIT retired steadily after reaching the backstretch. POLLY DEAR was far back throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:41. Off at 5:44. Winner, M. Nelson's blk. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PATCHEYE, $12.70, $6.30, $4.70; SCOTCH PEPPER, $6.00, $5.90; QUEEN HELEN, $7.20.

PATCHEYE, a trailer for the first half mile, began moving up on the outside leaving the backstretch, worked down the lane to the leader's flank at the furlong pole and drew out steadily. SCOTCH PEPPER, prominently placed all the way, continued with good energy to the close. QUEEN HELEN forced the early pace and held on gamely to the end. LUCK IN, restrained while racing well up, was unable to reach the leaders when called upon. BOCASETTE, under punishment, made up ground. COLD SPILL, impeded when QUEEN HELEN bore in at the start and unable to gain racing room down the backstretch, was going stoutly at the end when too late. CATCHALL retired after racing the first five furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; passing the winning post by a neck at 6:15. Off at 6:16. LIGHT BROOK, away slowly, moved up stoutly on the outside rounding the far turn, bore in slightly through the last furlong and held PAYRACK safe at the end. PAYRACK, a forward factor throughout, continued gamely to the end. RED ROAMER went to the front straightening out on the backstretch, was in close quarters when the two leaders bore in through the stretch, forcing Elston to take up. FAIRY STREET was unable to reach the leaders. UKRAINE, well placed, was unable to improve her position in the last five-sixteenths. GOLDEN WORDS displayed badly after displaying early speed.

Dear Al:

I can figure as how a person can sit down, write a stinging letter to a fellow, sign it "Turf Fan" and go for the cost of paper, envelope and a 3-cent stamp. However, I cannot for the life of me figure as how a person can get so unruly in the head as to send a paid telegram. I received one today. Perhaps the sender believes that I beat my head against the side of the press box and that I got so hot that they had to call out the forest-fire patrol squadron. However, I shook it off and would have forgotten the wire had it not contained a gem of a wisecrack. Among other things, it read: "If Phil Furr was going to shadow box tomorrow, you probably would pick the shadow to win." The sender is wrong. I would pick tomorrow. For what the telegram cost, the fellow could have played Allenfern, my best bet, that day.

D. C. Ring Receipts Showed $45,974 Increase for Fiscal Year

Operating Expenses of Commission Drop to $49.62 Average.

By Bill McCormick.

The second annual report of the District Boxing Commission will show a remarkable improvement in gate receipts and efficiency of conduct of bouts staged here during the period from May 21, 1935, to May 20, 1936.

For the preceding year the total gate receipts—not including the regular 10 per cent Federal tax—were $107,625.42. For the period covered by the latest report they were $153,599.94—an increase of $45,974.52.

There was a total of 78 shows staged in the District in the fiscal year just passed as compared to 64 the preceding 12 months, but the commission's expenses decreased from $4,873 to $3,870. This represents a decrease in average operating expense from $58 to $49.62 per show.

$1,959.23 Average Gate.

The average gate per show during the first year of legalized boxing here was $1,202.53. Last year it was $1,959.23. The boxing commission's "take" on each show the first year was $75.22 as compared to $102.77 for last year. Thus, with the help of the reduced operating expenses, the average profit per show to the boxing commission increased from $17.72 to $53.15.

The lading outdoor gates were the recent Pete Sarron-Freddie Miller featherweight championship card, which grossed $29,901.30; Tony Canzoneri-Frankie Klick lightweight encounter, which grossed $24,502; Pete Sarron-Joe Rivers bout, which drew $16,320, and Willie Reddish-Jack Rose engagement, attended by Joe Louis, which attracted an $8,849.70 crowd. None of the gross figures given include the 10 per cent Federal levy.

Bob Wilson and Phil Furr headed the indoor bouts, drawing $2,500.07 to Turner's Arena. Furr and Mickey Serrian lured $2,332.36 worth of cash customers through the turnstiles at the same site.

135 Knockouts Recorded.

Old Line Stickmen Nine to Play Today

Hopkins Lacrosse Team, Army Nine Are Foes.

Two University of Maryland teams are figuring in big tilts this afternoon.

While the Terp lacrosse ten is in Baltimore playing Hopkins in an effort to put a clincher on the Intercollegiate crown, the ball team will be at West Point winding up its season against Army.

The Terps have one more lacrosse game after today, with Penn State, believed a certain victim for the Terps. So far Maryland has not been beaten by a collegiate rival.

Maryland's 60-piece band will accompany the stick squad to Homewood Field in Baltimore to help enliven the occasion.

The Terp nine, which has won 13 of 19 games, will pitch George Wood against Army in an effort to end with a victory.

Tennant Hurls G-Men to 8-3 Victory

Commissioners Are Beaten as Investigation Wins Its 5th Straight.

The six-hit pitching of big Jim Tennant set the District Commissioners back on their heels yesterday with an 8-3 defeat as Bureau of Investigation won its fifth U. S. Government League victory in as many starts. It was Tennant's third successive league triumph and established him as one of the leading pitchers of The Washington Post Sandlot Association this year.

The Commissioners took their only lead in the third inning. Mills walked and took second on Chilcotte's sacrifice. Fry walked and Nelson singled, scoring Mills. Fry scored on Noone's fly to center to give the District team a 3-2 lead.

Investigation came back to take the lead, however, in the last half of the same inning. Morris led off the rally with a walk and took third on Mills' error of Barry's grounder. Taylor fanned, but Russell scored both Morris and Barry with a scratch hit which appeared to be only a pop-fly until Dick Nelson misjudged it and it fell for a hit.

Caldwell Wins In Baltimore Golf Play

Hillendale Star Will Meet Burnett in Semi-Final Bracket Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 22.—Ernie Caldwell, long-driving Hillendale star, advanced late this afternoon to the threshold of a second straight victory in the Baltimore Country Club Invitation golf tournament at Five Farms.

After toppling Robert Lowrey, of Shamokin, Pa., by 4 and 3 in the forenoon, Caldwell eliminated Eddie Semmler, a clubmate, by 3 and 2, in the second round.

Caldwell will play Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring, tomorrow morning in the lower half of the semifinal. The latter, the only player from the Washington area remaining in the championship flight, beat Harvey Johnson, from Columbia, by 4 and 3, this afternoon. Burnett easily triumphed over Robert Jones, of Hillendale, this morning, by 5 and 4.

The other semi-finalists are John S. Hoffman, of the host club, and Harry Root, jr., from the Palma Cela Country Club, Tampa, Fla.

Root Shoots 70.

Billy Detweiler, of Manor, survived the first round, but fell before Root in the afternoon. The Floridian, who shot a par 70 in the morning to eliminate Spencer S. Overton, of Rolling Road, continued his brilliant work with the putter to conquer Detweiler by 3 and 2.

A 20-hole match was played in the first sixteen, Johnson defeating J. D. Potts, jr., Baltimore Country Club.

First-round results of Washingtonians in the first sixteen: Waller Neumann, York, Pa., defeated Forest Thompson, Beaver Dam, 2 and 1; Billy Detweiler, Manor, defeated E. G. Barnes, Hillendale, 3 and 2; Volney Burnett, Indian Spring, defeated Robert E. Jones, Hillendale, 5 and 4; Harvey Johnson, Indian Spring, defeated J. D. Potts, jr., Baltimore Country Club, 1 up, 20 holes.

Second round—Harry Root, jr., Tampa, Fla., defeated Detweiler, 3 and 2; Burnett defeated Johnson, 4 and 3.

Second flight—Donald McPhail, Baltimore Country Club, defeated W. B. Moore, Beaver Dam, in the second round, 5 and 3; Moore downed Kyrle Preis, Baltimore Country Club, 3 and 1.

Labor, Accounts Win.

Labor Department defeated Civil Service Commission, 7 to 5, and Accounts and Deposits beat General Accounting Office, 12 to 3, yesterday, in Sports Center Government League games of The Post Sandlot Association.

Labor and Civil Service each got off to a 4-run start in the first inning. A home run by Murdock figured largely in the league leader's victory, which was their fifth in as many starts.

In a third Sports Center League game, PWA Housing handed a 4-to-1 defeat to Reconstruction Finance Corporation in a pitcher's battle between Saxe and Parsons.

Trade Vitality Strong Despite World Politics

New York, May 22.—Business continues to display surprising vitality over a wide front despite the political uncertainties abroad that are assuming increasing importance in any long-range appraisal of business fortunes. Business Week's index again moved upward. Retail trade is maintaining a fair margin over a year ago. Production activity in heavy industries is holding up well. Electric power output has been making an unusual upward spurt for two months in a period when the normal trend is downward. Construction and related industries are enjoying a spring bulge.

Oil interests were in a flurry this week as production of crude oil hit a new high. Fear of price wars popping up just when the big consuming season for gasoline was approaching sent a chill down many a spine. Oil securities felt the pressure of increased selling.

Machine tool makers rolled up enough new business in April to set a new high for the year to date, and to come within a fraction of the August, 1935, peak. Last month's record was particularly noteworthy because only 12 per cent of the business came from foreign sources as against 37 per cent last August.

Tire Business Revives.

Resumption of activity in the tire industry following the labor-troubles of March in the Goodyear plant explains the substantial 22 per cent increase in rubber consumption last month compared with March. This is a new all-time high, reducing stocks to a five and a half months' supply.

Residential contracts of $67,151,000, a 59 per cent gain over a year ago, were the best for any month since June, 1931. Non-residential building volume of $94,242,800 ran 128 per cent ahead of last year, and with the exception of December, 1935, was the best month since October, 1935. Public works and utilities scored a total of $73,412,500, an 81 per cent gain over last year.

Motor production has been tapering very gradually since the peak toward the close of April, when assemblies for the United States and Canada were undoubtedly well above the 500,000 mark, and now May looks good for better than 450,000.

Lumber consumption in the first half of 1936 is expected to reach about 10,650,000,000 board feet, against 8,615,000,000 board feet in the first half of 1935. This means that 1936 will be the best year since 1930.

Auto Output Declines.

Detroit, May 22 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that production of automotive plants for the current week totaled 110,845 cars and trucks, compared with 116,855 for the preceding week. Ward's attributes the decline largely to the reduction of operations in the Ford plants, which it says have returned to four-day schedules.

April Building Contracts Set 5-Year Record

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 22.—Construction contracts let during April were the highest for any month since October, 1931, except December, 1935, F. W. Dodge Corporation reported today.

Awards totaled $234,806,300 in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains, exceeding figures for March by 18 per cent and for April, 1935, by 89 per cent.

Residential awards of $67,151,000 stood 21.6 per cent and 59 per cent, respectively, above the preceding month and the corresponding month of last year. Contracts for non-residential building aggregated $94,242,800, representing increases of 15.7 per cent and 128 per cent, respectively. Awards for heavy engineering projects amounted to $73,412,500, representing gains of 17.8 per cent and 81.3 per cent.

Sections more than doubling the totals of a year ago included New England, the Southeast and Texas. Districts registering similar gains were those including Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Kansas City.

For the first four months of 1936, construction contracts for all classes east of the Rockies totaled $780,627,600, a gain of 85 per cent over the aggregate in the first four months of 1935.

Residential building in April scored outstanding gains in New England, the Pittsburgh area, southern Michigan, the New Orleans area and Texas.

Engineering construction awards rose to $36,173,000 for the past week compared with $34,299,000 a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported. Of the total $8,715,000 was for private construction against $5,187,000 in the like 1935 week.

Pork Again in Favor! Hogs Advance to $10

Chicago, May 22 (AP).—The $10 per hundredweight hog today reappeared after a two weeks' absence from the Chicago livestock market. Reinstatement of dressed pork in public favor caused price upturns in the wholesale livestock mart, observers said. In brisk trading, prices on live hogs rose 10 to 15 cents over last night's closing figures. The best grade of medium weight hog sold easily at 9.75@9.95 per hundredweight.

Pork loins were $22 on initial sales in the wholesale market, the highest this month and an increase of 50 cents to $1 over yesterday's figures.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Edge Upward in Restricted Trading; Bonds Hesitate; Farm Shares Higher.

New York, May 22.—Financial markets improved in speculative sections and weakened in the hardsoil area. Government bonds seemed a bit cast down as the estimates of the Treasury's June financing grew. Stocks moved cautiosuly with a harder tone but without any increase in activity. September wheat closed ⅝ of a cent higher at 85½ cents a bushel.

Stocks retraced much of the ground covered yesterday by going in the opposite direction. Opening prices were irregularly lower, after which, in spite of an increase in trading volume, the tone slowly hardened. At the close more stocks were showing small fractional gains than were showing losses. Stock turnover was around 700,000 shares. Throughout the session no quickening of the market's pulse nor marked slackening could be detected. The affair was sheer unrelieved dullness.

Broader List.

For all the slack dealing the trading list was a trifle broader than the day before. At least one or two sales took place in some stocks that failed to appear on the previous day. Coca-Cola and Eastman, for example, appeared on the tape and at firmer prices. Buoyancy was pronounced on the farm group of stocks. Case bounded up more than 4 points, Harvester rose better than 2 points. Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck climed 1 point or more.

The standard industrial issues as well as most of the speculative favorites gave the market a stronger appearance than it really posessed for the bulk of stocks. Steel hardened more than a point, Chrysler avanced over a point, General Motors rose a good fraction and Telephone and Consolidated Edison perked up. Western Union Johns Manville, Allied Chemical, United States Rubber, Schenley, Celotex, Timken, American News, Westinghouse, Atlas Powder, Philip Morris, Worthington Pump, Standard Oil, Sante Fe and Southern Pacific were bid up from 1 to 3 points, Louisiana Oil preferred had another good day and the electric power and light groups moved higher.

Francs Steady.

Francs were held steady at their gold point, namely 6.58 5-16 to 6.58⅜, and it is probable that further moderate engagements were arranged. Futures gave signs of easing further. The Bank of France statement, reporting a gold loss of around $33,000,000, reflected operations of a week in which short covering was lively and when the gold loss was to be expected to be materially less than the $100,000,000 registered during the week before. Next week's French bank statement also should show a moderate loss, for it will refer to happenings this week, during which gold shipments have been light. In a period of a little over a year the French gold loss has been appalling, amounting to about $1,700,000,000. If the $200,000,000 credit obtained by France in Great Britain be added to the gold loss, as it should be because it is repayable in gold, the loss figure since March 29, 1935, is raised to around $1,900,000,000.

Tax Uncertainty.

The swift turn of the Senate committee against the Administration's favored form for new corporation taxes and in support of a new 18 per cent levy on income, plus a 7 per cent undivided profits tax and the subjection of dividends to normal taxes for individuals, was followed too closely by signs of another change for the business and financial world to be greatly influenced. The Senate's latest guess appears to be at least an improvement on the former punitive taxes on undistributed profits, but it retains the principle and also seeks to add considerably to the business burden of taxation, already too onerous.

Should some such proposal as that of the Senate go through, few will be pleased. The old established corporations will see their actual tax bill considerably increased; the newer enterprises will be up against the same barrier, and in addition, will find it more difficult to store up reserves. However, the whole affair serves to emphasize the fact that, regardless of what is done with future spending, the huge debt already piled up is bound to lift taxes and reduce the standard of everybody's living.

That should not be allowed to create a spirit of hopelessness, for bad as the outlook may appear to be, it can grow, and is growing with each day of sustained expenditure, much worse. Spending will have to stop and the budget will have to be balanced (with higher taxes) and the currency stabilized before businessness can go much further along the road to recovery.

Economy of Scarcity.

In dollar value our exports are holding well, but the country seems to be entering a period of definite adverse balance of trade, so-called. The April foreign trade figures, published today by the Department of Commerce, show that for the third successive month our imports have run ahead of exports. The excess last month was $9,000,000. Including the net importation of silver, the adverse balance was $13,000,000. In the first four months, including silver, the excess of imports was $110,000,000.

As a great creditor nation some satisfaction might be felt from an excess import balance, as showing the increasing ability of foreigners to pay their debts to this country. Actually that satisfaction must be well salted down. Our debtors are not getting the benefit of our larger purchases, in the main, and they are not necessarily going to use what they do get to repay our loans. Thanks to our crazy notions of farm price pegging, the increased imports consist of cotton textiles, foodstuffs and other goods in large measure, which we ought to produce ourselves. The foreign trade figures suggest the permanent loss of markets that by right ought to be ours.

Our economy of scarcity and price lifting has hurt our foreign trade. Such increases in exports as have taken place can be traced partly to the general rise of the world from the depths of depression and to the expansion of production in industries which so far have escaped the blighting attentions on the managed economy experts. An import trade balance won't hurt if it be offset by doles to wheat and cotton farmers and encouraged by taxation and price and wage arrangements that keep domestic prices to consumers on an uneconomic level.

Bank Investments.

National banks deemed important the clarification of the Comptroller of the Currency's investment security rulings made by the Comptroller in a speech at Sacramento, given out in Washington today. The Comptroller said the fact that rating manuals class a security as "distinctly and predominantly speculative" does not prevent a bank from purchasing it under the regulations, provided the bank can convince an examiner the investment is sound. Heretofore the ban against buying such bonds or notes as were in that speculative class has been absolute; now it is up to the examiners, who are getting more authority every month. Banks here felt that the ruling was a helpful relaxation of the regulations. Since national banks are not usually forced quickly to liquidate even securities objected to by examiners, it was believed that no great harm would be caused even if bank views and those of examiners differed on a given instance and the bank in consequence would have to sell out a security.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed about one penny lower on reports of further rains in Australia and an extremely slow demand from foreign sources. Cotton futures held steady, complaints of drought in the East being offset by reports of favorable conditions elsewhere in the American cotton belt.

Economist Says Bonds Have Reached Peak

"The high grade bond market is more inflated now than the stock market was in 1929 when all the factors are considered," he went on, "and it has been brought about by the bankers themselves in an attempt to maintain dividends."

G. W. U. Heads Honor Memory Of Dr. C. E. Hill

Late Member of Faculty at University Praised at Services.

Tributes to the late Dr. Charles E. Hill who, prior to his death May 10 was for 20 years a member of the faculty of George Washington University, were paid at memorial services held at the university yesterday.

Dr. W. Reed West, professor of political science and assistant dean of the school of government, spoke of him as a "colleague and a friend," praising his sanity of judgment, modesty, moderation, courage and dependability.

"Few of his colleagues were fully conscious of his standing in this country and abroad. He had no capacity for self-exploitation," Dr. West said. "He seldom spoke of his own doings, and showed no inclination to advertise himself."

Speaking of Dr. Hill as "The Man and the Scholar," Dr. Charles C. Tansill said:

"To scholars throughout America his name has permanent meaning. The significance of his research in American diplomatic history is great. His work, 'Danish Sound Dues' will remain a model for scholars."

Frank H. Weitzel, a graduate of the class of 1931 and a former student of Dr. Hill, praised him as a teacher "who developed the powers of reason in his students; whose learning never displaced his native humanitty; who was friendly to all students."

Closing the meeting with an appreciation, the president of the university, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, said:

"In the death of Dr. Hill the university and every single one of us has lost a friend. Perfect clarity of mind and singleness of purpose marked his service. His work is done; his plan fulfilled. His life has counted. Unnumbered members of this university throughout the years will be his debtors."

Culbertson On Contract

A Very Involved Hand.

I am indebted to Frederic Ley, of New York, not only for submitting an interesting hand, but for suppying the complete and flawless analysis as well. His letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Culbertson:

"The inclosed hand contains quite a dramatic play which I never before have encountered in newspaper, book, or at the card table. It is a suicide Vienna coup and I would be interested in knowing whether you have ever, in your wide experience, run across this rare bird. I used the adjective "dramatic" purposely because to set up a trick in an opponent's hand, and then to throw his partner in to squeeze him out of this trick plus the needed one, appeals to me a great deal.

"East, dealer.

"Neither side vulnerable.

"The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 no trump	Pass	2 spades
Pass	3 no trump	Pass	Pass
Double	Redouble	Pass	Pass
Pass

"After his original pass, and with his partner not knowing what suit he wanted led, East's double struck me as being pretty queer and, probably, an effort to frighten my partner into four spades. I was afraid he might succeed, so I redoubled.

"West led the four of hearts and East's queen went to my king. Still placing East with all the spades, I led to the spade ace and finessed the spade jack on the return. Next I finessed the nine of hearts and, when this worked, the rest looked easy. All I had to do was to lead twice through the ace of clubs, marked by the double in the East hand, and the contract was home.

"This worked perfectly dandy, as you can see. West slaughtered my club king on the first lead and knocked out the ace of hearts, leaving me to get four tricks out of this mess:

"The only hope was some kind of a pseudo-squeeze, and to do this three tricks had to be lost in a hurry. I led a diamond from the dummy and East's jack won. He returned the king of diamonds, which I took.

"If I threw West in to cash his two hearts, East simply would throw spades and I would get nowhere. So I cashed my king of spades, setting up East's queen and giving the Viennese touch to the coup. West discarded a club. I next led the ten of hearts, which pleased West, and he said so. East wasn't pleased and finally let go the recently promoted queen of spades. West couldn't resist cashing his last heart, which hopelessly squeezed his partner. (Of course, had he led a club I was cooked.)

"East was rather angry, but I was boiling. Here was a play rarer than hen's teeth, and not one of them even mentioned it despite the fact that I made some leading remarks!

"Yours very truly,

"FREDERIC LEY."

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

Amid a laudatory gathering, William C. Ridenour (F), veteran mechanic, retired yesterday after 30 years of continuous service in the machine shops at the Navy Yard. He was presented with a watch by his fellow workers who paid tribute to his efficiency and good fellowship.

BAKER.

Mr. Ridenour said he has no definite plans for the future, but contemplates a trip to the Pacific Coast. He was born in Altoona, Pa., 61 years ago and entered the Navy Yard in 1906.

Mr. Ridenour, a widower, has two daughters and a son here. They are Mrs. E. B. Heimer, who resides with her father at 1417 Potomac avenue southeast; Mrs. Paul Leman, 4604 New Hampshire avenue northwest, and Elwood Ridenour, who is with Procurement Division, Treasury. Mr. Ridenour is active in the Columbia Lodge of the Machinists Union and Acacia Lodge, F. A. A. M.

About This Time—

Baseball tickets, racing forms,
Hiking boots and spurs,
Heavy oil and rumble seats,
Bumble bees and burrs.

Tennis racquet, rod and line,
Swimming suit and shorts,
Everything is ready now
To liven summer sports.

Beaches, parks and rolling green
Summon us anew—
But what's the use of dreaming when
There's so much work to do?

JAMES J. METCALFE (F),
Resettlement Administration.

Naval Retirement.

In vetoeing a bill to place a Naval Reserve officer on the retired list of the regular Navy with annual compensation of $2,887 instead of the $15 a month he is now receiving from Veterans' Administration for disability, President Roosevelt said:

"The retirement system of the regular Navy was provided for the twofold purpose of attracting desirable permanent personnel to the service and of vitalizing the active list. Its maintenance for such purpose is vital to the national defense, and it should not be jeopardized by utilizing it as a means of relief or for placing upon the regular retired list persons other than the permanent personnel of the naval service."

Student Ready For Graduation Kills Himself

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, N. Y., May 22.—While most of his classmates were dancing at the senior ball in the Hobart College gymnasium, Philip Tangier Smith Cooke, 24, son of a Springfield, Ohio, Episcopal minister, shot and killed himself early today in his room at the Sigma Phi Fraternity House.

Cooke's death cast gloom over preparations for the college's 111th commencement exercises, which open tomorrow and end Monday.

Underclassmen living in the house heard the shot and found Cooke on the floor with a .22 caliber rifle beside him.

He was taken to Geneva General Hospital, where he died two hours later without regaining consciousness.

Chief of Police Robert Morris and Coroner Frank H. Snyder said it was a clear case of suicide.

Testimony at an inquest this afternoon indicated a connection with the song "Gloomy Sunday," recently held responsible for many suicides in Hungary.

A sudent at William Smith College, Hobart's coeducational institution, told Coroner Snyder Cooke had told her at a recent dance he thought the song was "beautiful" and he was going to memorize the words.

Another witness said Cooke had been in a Geneva hotel the night before the shooting, and had said:

"It's gloomy Sunday. I'm going to do it tonight."

Another classmate said Cooke had told him he drove into the country last Sunday to kill himself, but "lost his nerve."

Fellow students and college authorities admittedly were mystified about a reason for his act.

A statement issued by President Murray Bartlett said Cooke's student standing was satisfactory and that the youth knew he was to receive his diploma Monday.

It will be awarded posthumously, the statement said.

His parents in Springfield also were unable to supply a motive for their son's suicide.

House Bill Seeks Arts Group Change

A bill to amend the organic act of the Fine Arts Commission was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa.

The measure provides that on the seven-man commission there shall be one painter, one sculptor one landscape architect and one horticulturist or botanist. The present law does not specify vocations of the members of the commission.

Gillette's bill also would prevent any member of the commission from succeeding himself after a four-year term and would restrict appointments by the President to two members from any one State.

Thomas

in a position to pull with my full weight.

"This would be inconsistent with my desire to serve my country, which—I hope my past public life jutsfiies me in saying this—always has been my object.

"I ought, in fairness to all parties and the House of Commons, emphasize that I feel no resentment against this demand for full and impartial investigation, inasmuch as the absolute integrity of the public of this country is involved.

"It is well known that I have no political differences with my colleagues or with the policy of the national government.

"I am most conscious of the grave and difficult problems—changing almost hourly—which have to be faced by the cabinet. In coming to this decision, which means so much to me, I can only wish you and all my late colleagues God speed in leading the nation from its present difficulties.

"Yours very sincerely,

"J. H. THOMAS."

Note of Acceptance.

Prime Minister Baldwin's brief, friendly note of acceptance follows:

"My dear Jim:

"You have acted as I should have done in your place.

"I accept your resignation with a deep regret which I know will be shared by all my colleagues.

"The loyal support which you have given through five strenuous years to the national government will always be remembered by those who have worked with you.

"With all good wishes, I am very sincerely yours,

"STANLEY BALDWIN."

Should Baldwin decide to replace Laborite, it is believed probable that Thomas with another national Kenneth Lindsay, civil lord of the admiralty, will be named.

Sim Samuel Hoare, who was forced by public indignation to resign from the Foreign Ministry when the abortive Hoare-Laval plan to end the Italo-Ethiopian war was announced last December, also was mentioned as a possible successor.

Hoare also has been mentioned as successor to Viscount Monsell of Evesham as first lord of the admiralty.

Dramatic Life.

Like most of Alger's heroes, he was left an orphan. He lived with his widowed grandmother and at the age of 9 left school to help support her. His first job was running headache powders to elderly spinsters as errand boy for a chemist.

For five years he was an engine wiper, during which time he educated himself, and in succession became fireman and then engineer.

When the railway company offered him an official position he refused it, saying, "I prefer to stick with my friends."

He already had identified himself with the National Union of Railwaymen, of which he later was to become a dominant official. It was to better the lot of laboring men that he decided to run for Parliament.

average woman. You are dealing with a scheming woman, a woman who has double-crossed her husband thousands of times."

Referring to her tryst with Arthur Beall, Darnestown, garage owner, on a July night in 1933, Oxley cried out:

"She defiled the last resting place of the dead and the church yard, the temple of our Maker.

"When she did that she reached the point where she would commit any crime."

W. Preston Lane, a member of the defense counsel, told the jury that the prosecution was guilty of "diabolical persecution to inflame your passion."

Persecution Charged.

He said that John (Googy) Carnell, erstwhile Rockville bartender, and other former convicts, who have testified that Mrs. Lyddane hired them to murder her husband, actually were blackmailing her.

They knew about her affair with Arthur Beall, Lane said, and they demanded money of her on a threat to expose that affair.

"Googy," he said, concocted the murder conspiracy story to save himself.

A stunning blow was dealt the defense this morning when Judges Frank Wagaman and David Robb barred "Slom" Lyddane from appearing as a defense witness.

He was the star defense witness at Mrs. Lyddane's first trial in Rockville, which resulted in a hung jury.

Lyddane, who has stood by his wife since she was arrested on April 1, 1935, on a charge of plotting his murder, was on the witness stand this morning when Prosecutor Pugh moved that he be barred as witness.

Pugh contended that Lyddane's appearance would be "contrary to public policy."

Betrayal Charged.

Testimony was completed at the morning session.

Assistant Prosecutor Oxley, in addressing the jury, said:

"The object of punishment in a case like this is to protect the community. It doesn't make any difference whether her husband says he doesn't want that protection."

"She betrayed her husband," Oxley shouted, "she betrayed her family, and she betrayed her employer in the bank."

At this point he mentioned the graveyard tryst.

"She pretended to be a decent citizen," he said. "Why, she wasn't any better than "Googy" Carnell.

"Her murder plan was so despicable that she couldn't even get the former convicts to go through with it."

The assistant prosecutor ridiculed Mrs. Lyddane's plea that "Googy" Carnell was blackmailing her. He pointed out that she continued going to the Dixie Tavern, where Carnell was employed, even after she alleged that he started blackmailing her.

"Why," said Oxley, "she wouldn't have gone there to eat if Googy had been bothering her. But we find her hiring "Googy's" bedroom and using it with Arthur Beall.

"If she could go with Arthur Beall to a bedroom and to a last resting place of the dead, she was capable of hiring assassins to send a bullet through "Slom." She wanted to continue with Beall uninterrupted.

Explains Conspiracy.

"Gentlemen, I expect to come to Hagerstown again, but I hope to God it's not on a mission like this."

Defense Counsil Lane, former attorney general of Maryland, followed Oxley.

He said: "Mrs. Lyddane is not being tried here for her transgressions with Arthur Beall."

The prosecution, he said, had brought a "coterie of gangsters" here to "smear this lady with mud."

Lane said that, under the law, a conspiracy could only exist where there was an "agreement" between two or more minds.

"If you believe," he said, "that Carnell never intended to kill her husband, or get anybody to do it, then your verdict must be an acquittal."

He quoted from Carnell's testimony to show that Carnell never intended to kill anybody.

"This is a serious matter. You have before you a lady from Montgomery County, who has laid her case in your hands.

"She is, as I have said, the victim of diabolical persecution. Bear in mind that this lady was secretary in a Rockville bank for ten years. Yes, she was involved in a divorce proceeding. But remember the bank continued to employ her after that.

Lane said that "Googy" Carnell knew he was guilty of blackmail, and when he was arrested he looked for an "out."

That out, he said, was his story about Mrs. Lyddane plotting her husband's murder.

In his peroration, Lane swung around and faced that part of the room where Mrs. Lyddane sat flanked by her father and "Slom."

He said:

"I feel sure the jury will say to you, 'Go back to Montgomery County with your husband and father, who have stood by you in this trouble.'

"I would rather believe them than the gangsters who have been paraded before these jurors.

"Mrs. Beall is alive. This woman's husband is alive. But she has been crucified."

Martin Ingram, State's attorney for Washington County, was the first member of the prosecution staff to address the jury.

"For five days," he said, "you gentlemen have been in this courtroom and have heard this drama unfolded.

Refers to Note.

"I ask you gentlemen as reasonable men, if you wanted somebody killed, who would you go to—your clergyman? Of course not. You would go to a man like 'Googy' Carnell. The defense will blacken his character, but the more they blacken it, the more they will help the State's case.

"You will be asked by the defense to disregard the testimony of some of these men because they are former convicts.

"If that was all the evidence in the case, I too would ask you to disregard it.

"But let's see if any of this testimony is corroborated."

Ingram showed the jury the "Googy" note, a missive demanding consummation of the "deal" or return of the money.

"The defense will tell you that 'Googy' Carnell wrote this note," said Ingram.

"Do you believe Carnell is capable of preparing a note of that type?

"You have read that note several times. Do you think it could have been written by a person as illiterate as Carnell has shown himself to be?

Defends Expenditures.

"Take the first word in the note. It is 'Googy,' you will notice that it is inclosed with quotation marks and followed by a colon. Why I doubt if Carnell knows the meaning of quotation marks or a colon."

In this "Googy" Carnell spelled his nickname, not as it appeared in the much-mentioned note, but as "Googie."

Ingram told the jury that the defense would make much over the fact that the word night in the note was spelled "nite."

He pointed out many educated persons spell the word that way, just as they use "thru" for through.

Ingram anticipated that the defense would call attention to the fact that Ira Gullickson, Washington writing expert, received $475 for his work.

"Remember, gentlemen," said Ingram, "that behind Gullickson's testimony were weeks and weeks of work and preparation."

Defense Witness Scored.

Referring to the testimony of Baker, the defense writing expert, Ingram said:

"I don't like to say that anybody falsified on the witness stand, but I'll let you decide for yourselves.

"It seems to me that if you decide that Mrs. Lyddane wrote the note you need go no further. You can then do nothing but find a verdict of guilty."

Stedman Prescott, in addressing the jury at the night session, said:

"The character witnesses did not say that Mrs. Lyddane was a scarlet woman.

Prescott told of Beall's "long pursuit" of Mrs. Lyddane.

"Anne Lyddane," he said, "is not the only woman who, after two years' persuasion of a man, yielded to his embraces."

The State, he went on, had four expert witnesses—"and three of them were expert liars."

He also commented on the fact that though Harry Thomas, one of the alleged conspirators, was in jail here, the State had not put him on the stand.

Denouncing "Googy" Carnell, the State's chief witness, Prescott said:

"Why gentlemen, Carnell would send his own mother to jail if it would save him. Gentlemen, these were gutter rats you listened to."

Prescott made much over the word "nite" in the note which the State said Mrs. Lyddane wrote and which was found on Carnell.

He showed the jury "Googy's" written confession and pointed out that he had written the word night as "nite."

"This woman's entire life, her entire future, depends on you gentlemen," Prescott said.

"Bear in mind that 'Googy' Carnell was the only man who testified about any conspiracy. Gentlemen, would you convict a yellow dog on such testimony? Suppose your own future depended on such testimony."

Prescott asked the jury to ignore the testimony of Ira Gullickson, expert of the Washington Police Department, who testified that the "Googy" note was written on the typewriter once used by Mrs. Lyddane.

"You can get experts to testify to anything," Prescott said. "You can get a half dozen on one side and a dozen on the other.

"Gentlemen, if you have got to make mistakes, don't make it on the side of convicts. Don't side against white people for graduates of Lorton."

"I think every accusation has been made against this defendant, except that she is crazy.

"She has told the same story each and every time.

"You gentlemen heard her and you are in a position to judge whether she was telling the truth.

"The State says she wanted to kill her husband and Mrs. Beall and that she told the gangsters how to rob the bank in which she worked.

"And yet they don't say she is crazy."

Here Prescott compared Mrs. Lyddane with Mary Magdalene.

"When she was brought before the Savior," Prescott cried out, "he said, 'let him who is without sin cast the first stone.'"

Pugh cited s corroborative evidence the "Googy" note and the papers found on "Gambler Jack" Boland. These papers included a paper match clip bearing the word "Laddane" and a memorandum on "Slom's" hours of work.

"They are trying to present a sweet wife, crazy about her husband," Pugh said, "in the next breath they mention what they call her indiscretions.

"Would you call those things indiscretions. We are not trying her for adultery. We are trying her because she is a scheming woman, a woman who was in love with a married man, a woman who was notoriously double-crossing her husband, and who plotted his murder."

Theft Suspects Seized on Street In Wild Melee

Spectator Also Arrested for Threat to Kick Policeman's Teeth Out.

When a passerby near Fourteenth and I streets northwest stopped Policeman John Lohman, First Precinct, and pointed out a pair of colored shoplifter suspects yesterday he didn't anticipate what was to follow.

Attempts to arrest the accused couple—a man and woman—prompted scenes of wild confusion. More than 500 curious spectators milled in the street, jaming traffic. Reserves were sent from Police Headquarters. An overzealous bystander was arrested after allegedly threatening to "kick out" a policeman's teeth.

When Lohman's informant pointed to the colored pair, the former started in pursuit. The couple fled into an alley. Walking through the alley in plain clothes was Policeman George Chappelle. He tried to capture the fugitives, but they eluded him. He joined Lohman in the chase—and so did about 25 or 30 citizens.

Chappelle drew his gun. The volunteer captors disappeared—behind automobiles, fences and walls. The fleeing couple halted. Chappelle grabbed the man and Lohman the woman. A battle ensued. During the scuffle, a man approached Chappelle and reputedly said something about "kicking out his teeth." The policeman resented the stranger's intrusion and grabbed him by the belt. The stranger allegedly countered with a right-to-the-chin gesture.

It was nearly half an hour before the Fourteenth and I street section returned to normal. Nobody seemed to know what happened—but everybody was trying to find out.

At the precinct station, the colored pair, charged with investigation, gave names of Raymond Wood, 29, 400 block of Elm street northwest, and Catherine Howard, 35, 600 block North Capitol street. The stranger, charged with assault and disorderly conduct, said he was Walter R. Tipton, 45, 600 block F street northwest.

On The Air Today

A number of interesting alterations in the radio picture are taking place these days which will make some changes on your dials in the coming semester.

Lou Holtz, the dialect comedian, is reported to have signed a contract which will bring him to the audience of the Mutual network—WOR, WLW notably. He last was heard with Whiteman a year or so ago.

Cecil DeMille takes over the production of the "Radio Theater" beginning June 1. DeMille recently appeared on Bing Crosby's program, although there was no particular evidence of the noted motion picture director's interest in the airways at that time.

Nelson Eddy is expected to replace Grace Moore next winter in the program which featured the singer-actress this last season. You may remember Miss Moore featured Eddy several times as a guest singer in the series.

The program known as "Magic Mirror" is expected to go out to the C. B. S. network next fall. It features Ed Nell, jr., who was last heard on a network show in the fade-out weeks of "Life Is a Song," recently replaced by Jack Hylton and his Continental Revue.

The spot left open by Crumit and Sanderson, who are to fill Phil Baker's Sunday night period for the summer, will be taken by Paul Whiteman's piano playing star, Ramona.

Of local interest is the moving of the "Professor Quizz" show to the Willard Hotel, Willard Room, each Saturday night so that listeners may be present and see how its all done. The move was decided on after it became apparent, with two performances only, that the WJSV studios woud not accomodate the crowds. No doubt about it, "Quizz" is a grand show to watch. Suggestion for those who attend tonight (8:30): The part of "Professor Quizz" is done by Jim McWilliams, famous comic of two-a-day vaudeville. Insist that he do a show for the audience after the broadcast.

Dr. Abbot Named To Edison Group

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, yesterday was named a member of the scholar-plan committee of the recently formed Thomas Alva Edison Foundation.

The foundation is planned as a "living memorial" to the inventor. Its purpose is to grant financial assistance to young people, either in schools or in industry, to permit them to conduct research or continue their education.

Owen D. Young is chairman of the national campaign now being conducted to obtain funds. Among those serving on the committee with Dr. Abbot are R. A. Millikan, of California Institute of Technology, and Karl C. Compton, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Children's Communion.

First Holy Communion will be given the children of the Immaculate Conception Church at 9 a. m. mass tomorrow. Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor, will celebrate. The Rev. Mitchell Cartwright, of St. Ambrose's Church, Baltimore, will preach at the 5 p. m. service, which will be broadcast.

Traffic Halted As Arab-Jewish Tension Grows

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, May 22.—Authorities, with tension undiminished and this Holy City like an armed camp, imposed an emergency ban tonight on all motor traffic in the southern half of Palestine.

Effective at noon tomorrow, a special police permit will be required for motorists.

British authorities called on additional troops to stamp out terrorism in which 26 Jews, 16 Arabs and a Christian have been killed since April 19, when an Arab civil disobedience strike began. The Arabs are demanding that British authorities stop Jewish immigration and sale of land to Jews.

Jerusalem and Jaffa, where all street traffic now is protected with armed convoys, are included in the new emergency ban.

Steel-helmeted troops, with fixed bayonets, were more in evidence on the streets than at any time in the past five weeks and were guarding all approaches to the walled Old City here, where many Jews are quartered.

British police were armed with rifles and native police with heavy pick handles and shields.

A battalion of Scottish Highlanders from Cairo landed and made headquarters at Nablus and other detachments were sent to Tulkarm and Jenin.
